THE

TD.

1899

:1,000.

V.

the with and hich

ares in a with so the he

ŝ

Freethinker

Edited by G. W. FOOTE.

Vol. XIX.-No. 48.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1899.

PRICE TWOPENCE.

War and Humanity.

ls opening this article we take (or make) the opportunity of expressing what all our readers must more or less reel_namely, a sympathy with Lord Salisbury in his domestic bereavement. It is a sad blow to lose a devoted devoted and beloved wife. Life is never the same afterwards. The greatest social and political triumphs are unsatisfying; the most golden fruitage of success has an aftertaste of bitterness. Death is the great veller. It makes no difference, when the dear partner of all one's joys and sorrows lies dead, whether her hody body rests upon a bed that cost ten shillings or one that cost is nothing then. It that cost fifty pounds. Externals are nothing then. It is only the internal that counts. The stroke is the same for all. for all; every circumstance of environment disappears in the in the tragedy; the man himself shivers in the chill wind of the tragedy is the man himself shivers will feel this wind of fate. Lord Salisbury, therefore, will feel this shock like the poorest plebeian. And it comes at a ^{homent} which is otherwise very trying. Few men would envy the Premier's position. He bears a very be strained of responsibility. All his statecraft will be strained to see us right through this South African Surely, then, he rouble and its collateral difficulties. Surely, then, he entitled to our profoundest sympathy. He is an itstocrat aristocrat, and sometimes a haughty one; but he is spending to according to ^{spending} his life in his country's service, according to his lights, and this is infinitely better than the pursuit of personal of personal pleasure, into which so many men of wealth And social pleasure, into which so the provide position are naturally tempted.

From the stricken Premier we turn to the gay and slive Garage visit, not to us, festive German Emperor, who is on a visit, not to us, to his with their grandmother. The ordinary newspapers, with their grandmother. The ordinary newspan. Public of the system of this visit; but, of Public of the political significance of this visit; but, of course the political significance on the bank of ^{course} the political significance of this visit, part, ^{conjecture} the political significance of this visit, part, ^{conjecture} are all drawing cheques on the bank of ^{for} certain. This much at least may, perhaps, be taken at all, at the present ^{for certain.} This much at least may, perhaps, be taken juncture the D coming here at all, at the present Juncture, the Emperor shows that he cherishes no Positive unfriendliness, and that the Government of Germany unit, in the government of the principal thing — is Germany which is really the principal thing is with us. And, the principal the principal the principal the deed, there at peace, if not at amity, with us. And, indeed, there is no reason in the world why England and Germanic is no reason in the world has nothing to and Germany should quarrel. England has nothing to Rain by a broad Rain by a breach of good will with any of the Powers; and on the other hand, Germany has a good deal to Rain by not quarrelling with England, if she really we have to pursue the second data and the second data We are out the policy of colonial enterprise. We are quite aware that some German newspapers are printing with aware that some German newspapers are quite aware that some German newspaper be printing very bitter things about England. But but states more the press is tremendously exaggeration but states more than a pleasant fiction amongst editors and journalists, Newsbut statesmen smile at it amongst themselves. Newshappens are absolutely irresponsible, and for that reason they are absolutely irresponsible, and for that reading public opinion weight. They follow instead of leading They are echoes rather Public opinion and sentiment. They are echoes rather a large prain of general voices. And in this fact there is at present large prain of consolation. Certain public opinion of of what they are pleased to call the public opinion of https://what they are pleased to call the public opinion of https://www.are.org/are French journals. Well, if this were really public opinion, the reminder would be impressive. But is it public opinion? The German newspapers pointed at are always against England — which discounts the importance of their hostility on this occasion. As for the majority of French journals at present, it is the simple truth that they are suffering from a bad attack of "England on the brain." Anglophobia is the order of the day in France. The Nationalist party-the liars, tricksters, and assassins of the Dreyfus case; the persecutors of the Jews, merely as Jews; the conspirators against the Republic and freedom of thought and speech-have all along had only one foreign policy, and that is an insane hatred of England. Well, if these men rail at us with extra vehemence just now, why should we regard it as particularly significant? National hatred and envy are not public opinion. The latter we should always listen to respectfully; the former we should shrug our shoulders at, while taking precautions against any possible act of madness. On the whole, the Catholics and Royalists of France are playing a bad game very badly. They seem bent on picking a quarrel with England if they can. But if they do they will need something stronger than the Pope's prayers to help them. A war with France would be hateful to all Liberals, Radicals, Socialists, and Republicans in this country; but, if it were forced upon us, it would be prosecuted with vigor; and, as it would be almost entirely a naval war, the result would probably be that at the end of a month or two every French battleship still afloat would be shut up in harbor. The Patrie is good enough to say that 25,000 Frenchmen, while we are occupied in South Africa, could invade and conquer England. Well, for their own sakes, we hope they will stay at home. Happily, however, the French government keeps sane and level-headed; so we may smile at the ravings of boulevard journalists.

And now we turn to the more especial purpose of this article. The war is going on in South Africa, and of course it is a ghastly business, as war always is. Guns, rifles, lances, and bayonets are not holiday articles. They are meant to wound and kill. We pity the poor wounded on our own side, and we pity still more the widows and fatherless children of the dead. We also pity the poor wounded Boers, and the widows and orphans in many a far-off Transvaal farm. Human feelings are much the same everywhere, and suffering and grief on all sides call for our compassion. We hope this war will soon be over ; and, as there can be but one end to it, we hope that General Buller will be swift and thorough, and compass his aim with the least possible loss of life. When he has succeeded the political problem begins. That, indeed, is what will tax the wisdom and sagacity of our statesmen.

Meanwhile it is pleasant to note the amenities that Meanwhile it is pleasant to note the amenities that Meanwhile it is pleasant to note the amenities that Meanwhile it is pleasant to note the amenities that alleviate the horror of this struggle. No doubt the threat to shoot British officers at Pretoria if a certain Boer spy comes to grief at Ladysmith is only a bit of brag President Kruger, who is not a savage, could hardly mean it seriously. Indeed, we hope the report "We have several wounded Boer patients, and it is really amusing to see our large-hearted Tommy Atkinses fraternising with the enemy. A touching little scene happened yesterday. One of the Gordons had his arm taken off in exactly the same place. I took charge of the latter as he was brought down from the theatre, and on his becoming conscious the two poor fellows eyed each other very much, till our good-natured Tommy could bear it no longer. 'Sister,' he called, 'give him two cigarettes out of my box, and tell him I sent them. Here is a match; light one for him.' I took the cigarettes and the message to the Boer, and he turned and looked at Tommy in amazement, and then, quite and looked at Tommy in amazement, and then, quite overcome, he burst into tears, and Tommy did the same, and I am afraid I was on the point of joining in the chorus, but time would not permit it."

Well said and well done, Tommy Atkins! The tears you fetch from a wounded enemy's eyes are better than all the blood you draw from his veins. It is this spirit of human fellowship, deep down in men's hearts, that gives us the best hope for the future. How much of the quarrelling and fighting in the world is, after all, the result of mere misunderstanding ! If we could only get to know each other more, we should be better friends. It is mutual intimacy that must lead to the fraternisation of the peoples.

G. W. FOOTE.

Blight of Superstition.

In all ages of its existence superstition has proved a blight upon the noblest instincts and the loftiest aspirations of the human race. It has cramped the growth of intelligence, filled life with gloom and mistrust, associated death with groundless terrors, and sub-stituted phantoms for realities. Thus mental light has been prevented from illuminating the human mind, from the cradle to the grave. The province of Secularism is to destroy as much as possible this nightmare of priestly dominion, and to replace it with a consciousness of man's real power and duty. The term "superstition" has received many intended definitions, each explanation of the word being deemed appropriate to views which were thought absurd and opposed to the belief of those who furnished the defini-tion. For instance, orthodox Christians, who repudiate the notion that the features of their religion are superstitious, readily apply the phrase to the views of others whose faith rests upon the belief in another kind of supernatural power. We intend, however, to show that in many respects the tenets of Christianity are the very essence of superstition, and that they differ only in degrees from the wild forming in details to the tenet. degree from the wild fancies indulged in by the so-called heathen. Superstition has been defined as "Belief with-out evidence"; "Belief based on mere sentiment." Miss Plumptre says that superstition is "the tendency to embrace a statement with little or no investigation, and, having embraced it, to endow it with a spurious infalli-bility." Dr. Maudsley remarks : "To treat ancient truths as necessarily modern verities is superstition." If the orthodox faith be tested by these definitions, it must he pronounced as thoroughly superstitious. Perhaps the following may be taken as the most apt definition of the popular theological superstition : " Religious fear which Such fear is common, more or less, to all the popular supernatural faiths of the world. The feeling of awe and helplessness produced by the various convulsions of nature has caused the belief in the interference of some reference to the supposed termination of all mundants and epidemics. The amount of superstition prevailing in Italy, Spain, and Portugal has been attributed to the frequent and destruction frequent and destructive agencies of nature; and it of hannens that the happens that these were the countries in which the ders first established their authority, and where they s retain much of their influence over the general masses of the people.

NOVEMBER 26, 1899

Taking the popular belief in Christianity, apart from modern modifications, it is not easy to discern any great distinction between it and what is generally looked upon as superstition. If we take as superstition. If we take away from the Christian faith the item of fear, and the idea of the direct agency of a superior power in the events of human life and in the movements of general nature there is practically the movements of general nature, there is practical nothing remaining of the theology of Christ. This fact is the more perceptible if the form of the theology of Christ. is the more perceptible if we follow the development of To Christianity from its inception to the present time. show the force of this statement, we need only take on the belief of the first generation belief of the first generation of Christians, that the end of the world was then at hand. Notwithstanding that the predicted signs of such as the predicted signs of such an extraordinary event the not realised during the lifetime of those to whom the prediction was made to whom the to whom the prediction was made, many Christians still profession believe that the "last day" is not far off. If this is not a Christian superstition, the word has no rational mean-ing. What were at first recorded environment of the environment What were at first regarded as signs of the end e world have been are are and as signs of the end ing. What were at first regarded as signs of the environment of the world have been repeatedly observed since, but the "end has not yet come." Scientific observation has demonstrated that these "signs" were not indication of a general dissolution, but simply manifestations of the regular operations of nature. This is a proof that science regular operations of nature. This is a proof that science

Let us take the central and universal heathen bein sacrifice. How such of sacrifice. How such a cruel, unjust, and man, doctrine became so universal to man. doctrine became so universally believed is not to many minds obvious, when it is minds obvious, when it is seen what the barbarous practice connotes. It is store to the participant minds obvious, when it is seen what the barbarour practice connotes. It is difficult to recognise and with the suffering of another where no personal associa-tions have occurred. Yet punishing the innocent the excusing of the guilty and the inflicting of punishing and miscon excusing of the guilty and the inflicting of purishment and misery upon the innocest and misery upon the innocent are unjust, and a violation of the dictates of common are unjust, and a violation of the dictates of common sense. How the two, the together, can constitute divine justice can only be under stood by those who accept support the in preference to action stood by those who accept superstition in preference in acting upon the principle of the acting upon the principle of the sense of human risht. But this heathen doctring in the sense of human right. But this heathen doctrine is found to be an important innecession what are held to be an important factor in what are held to be superior religions, have innocent lamb of the Old Testament is said to New atoned for the sins of Israel, while the lamb of the is Testament is supposed to have taken away the christ atoned for the sins of Israel, while the lamb of the New Testament is supposed to have taken away of christi the world. But if such were the object of christi coming on earth, he decidedly failed in Christendon inasmuch as there are more "sins" in Christendon to-day than ever. This may be unfortunate for us, but is it not a "godsend" for the clergy? What would they do for a living if all sins had been taken in both Truly their occur. is it not a "godsend" for the clergy? What would they do for a living if all sins had been taken a bath Truly their occupation would have been grone. The the Old and New Testament teaching of sacrifice her idea of innocence is presented, the only difference field that in the one case a lower animal was son to while in the other God gave his beloved son and executed amidst the exultations of an infuriated fact We hardly know which is the more astonishing superexecuted amidst the exultations of an infuriated fact We hardly know which is the more astonishing upper that so many persons should believe such a such stition, or that any sane individual should believe for inneteenth century, attempt to impose it upper The much-talked-of purity, simplicity, and divine nation of Christianity amount simply to this—the substituted of Christianity amount simply to this—the substitution of a man for a lamb or treat act a satisfaction to man of Christianity amount simply to this the substitution of a man for a lamb or goat as a satisfaction to man According to modern ideas the accifice of the instead of the of a man for a lamb or goat as a satisfaction to man According to modern ideas, the satisfaction of the instead of the beast would be considered more et form but, in either case, the belief in sacrifice, as should not be overlooked the total superstition. It should the be overlooked the total superstition. but, in either case, the belief in sacrifice, as set in not the Bible, is a grovelling superstition. It shells in the infancy of the human race is a direct contration the Christian theory, that man was more infancy the morning of time than his descendants are stitudies Christians indulge in a very foolish superstitudies affairs. They believe that the earth is to be consumed by fire, as it is said it was once destroyed by water. Christians also suppose that the eye of an angry god is satching every action of his children, and taking note of their every word; that behind them is the fallen dam, who was the cause of all their misery ; and that before them are the penal fires of hell, from which but few of the human family can ever escape. It is difficult to say who holds the more enviable position—the untutored child of nature or the modern Christian, whose that the the more enviable position the modern the structure of the modern the structure of the structure whose little culture and semi-civilisation should make the torment of his mind the more acute. It has been remarked that, if men could not have superstition in one form, they may if men could not have superstition in one form, they would secure it in another. This certainly does and the human race where does appear to be the history of the human race where gnorance has prevailed and priestcraft has reigned supreme. Instances of this unfortunate state of man's mind may be seen in the substitution of saints for less minated idels animated idols and the incorporation of Pagan cere-monies into the Christian Churches. The worship of Wirein the Christian Churches. M_{arch} V_{irgin} Mary, or the observance of Lady-day M_{arch} 25), took the place of the day dedicated in M_{arch} 25 . p_{agan}^{tarch} 25), took the place of the day dedicates At pagan times to Cybele, the mother of the gods. At the Reformation some of the beliefs of the Dark Ages were left in the catholic Church for the were left in the hands of the Catholic Church for the reason the hands of the Catholic Church with less reason that the Protestants were content with less belief, and fewer miracles and legends. They reduced the number of humber of ceremonies, and did less fasting and penance than their predecessors; but orthodox Protestants never intered in predecessors; but orthodox They modified their predecessors; but orthodox Protestanto dified their super the domain of Rationalism. They modified their super twith them. In their superstitions, but they did not part with them. In the early sweden the early portion of the present century Sweden enacted inquisitorial laws as cruel and unjust as those ^{as Catholic D} ^b Catholic D ^{as} Catholic France. A still more striking illustration of the tenacity with which some people cling to old superwho visited the same people cling to our super-who became nominally Christians centuries ago. Kraff, who visited them in 1839, says their Christianity was mixed up with the in 1839, says their Stanity, and idolatry, and was with Judaism, Mohammedanism, and idolatry, The fact is, and was a mass of rites and superstitions. if unfettered thought is ignored and the habit of reason-ing despiced thought is ignored and the habit of vague hs despised, nothing remains but a tendency to vague perstitions, whether it be among the unclothed resultions, whether it be attrong wages or the robed saints of Palestine. If another be banished If ever superstition is to be banished from the earth, must be built of the invariable it must be by a general recognition of the invariable discoveries of the most important When this truth is fully discoveries of modern science. When this truth is fully recognised, the foolish suppositions about the interwhich is marvellous and extraordinary will then no nore the investion but will be investigated. And the Nore the feared, but will be investigated. And the investigation is extended and its results made forming in asses, the less likelihood there will be forming inaccurate conclusions about the laws of ¹⁰rming inaccurate conclusions about the laws c. and matter, and superstition will proportionately the io blight the law superstition will proportionately the world. The happiness and thwart the progress of CHARLES WATTS.

No

BACO

R

Roger Bacon and the Awakening of Europe.

(Concluded from page 740.) a period of term of imprisonment endured until 1267 main period of term of imprisonment the a period first term of imprisonment endured unit the malice of his enemies indirectly led to the writing of the reach by virtue of statistic virtues. Reports having reached the ears of Pope Urban IV. concerning the biology of the ears of Pope Urban IV. concerning the biology of the ears of Pope Urban IV. concerning the biology of Records work and writings, one of Clement IV., heretical nature of Which he still lives. heretical nature of Pope Urban IV. concerning the hard nature of Bacon's work and writings, one of hard chaptering of Bacon's work and writings, one of hard chapter ^{was} commissioned to inquire into the matter.* Whether, ^{bulcodi} was favorable to the poor imprisoned scholar, ^{brocertain.} Several writers are of that opinion, but ^{bulcodi} sor Adameen dismisson such an opinion as a motive of ^{thereference} it is certain that, immediately ^{thereference} it is certain that, immediately ^{thereference} is Pope, he commanded Bacon to supply him with a "fair copy" of all his writings. The issuing of such an order was easier than its execution. The bare materials required would cost about ± 60 . The Pope had sent nothing, and Bacon was penniless. From people in position he could get nothing. The Franciscans were too powerful to be crossed. "How often," he laments, "was I looked upon as a shameless beggar! how often was I repulsed! Distressed above all that can be imagined, I compelled my friends, even those who were in necessitous circumstances, to con-tribute what they had, to raise money at interest, to sell much of their property, to pawn the rest." It was by such struggles as these that Bacon was able to comply with the Pope's demand, and in the extraordinarily short time of about eighteen months he wrote those treatises, the Opus Majus, Opus Minus, and Opus Tertium, which mark him as the first Englishman to point out the proper course for a scientific study of nature.

Green says (Short II ory of English People): "Some of the lement INS of Bacon had been brought under the notice of Pope inself, serving Urban in that capacity.

These three essays are, as Green says, wonderful alike in plan and detail. With many of the scientific idiosyncrasies of his age Bacon had not quite parted company. He accepts alchemy and astrology, and even appears to have speculated on the discovery of the Philosopher's Stone and the elixir of life. But in nearly all other respects he belongs to the seventeenth century rather than to the thirteenth. At a time when the introduction of mathematics into physics was being protested against by Albertus Magnus, the "Ape of Aristotle," Bacon wrote : "Physicists ought to know that their science is powerless unless they apply to it the power of mathematics, without which observation languishes, and is incapable of certitude." And, again, he complains that the neglect of this instrument of research has paralysed all efforts : "For he who knows not mathematics cannot know any other science ; and. what is more, he cannot discover his own ignorance, or find its proper remedies." While Thomas Aquinas and his school were spinning metaphysical subtleties, and discussing questions that fully realised the child's defini-tion of a parable as "A heavenly story with no earthly meaning," Bacon was striving to introduce a new method into philosophy, insisting upon the uselessness of speculation unless brought into line with experience, warning his contemporaries that "The shortness of life requires that we should choose for our study the most useful objects, and exhibit knowledge with all clearness and certitude." At a time when to question the authority of the Church meant imprisonment or death, he could declare that "Authority is valueless unless its warranty is shown; it does not explain, it only forces us to believe. And, as far as reason is concerned, we cannot distinguish between sophism and proof unless we verify the conclusion by experience and practice."

A theoretical musician, geometrician, and geographer, Bacon stumbled upon many truths, the full value of which was not seen till centuries later. Whether he discovered gunpowder as the result of his own researches, or simply gained a knowledge of its manufacture from the Mohammedans, is uncertain, but his writings show him to have been acquainted with it. He also describes a substance (phosphorus) that "glows in the dark like a full moon." He suggested the possibility of reaching the Indies by -a suggestion which reaches Columbus sailing to the westthrough the medium of a Spanish writer, Pedro de Alliaco. He suggested a reform of the calendar that was not carried out until 1582. If he did not construct a telescope, he at least laid down the lines on which one might be built, 200 years before Galileo. It is after having dealt with the laws of light, and corrected many of the erroneous opinions then current, that he finishes by saying: "It is easy to conclude from the rules established above that the largest things can appear very small and vice versa, that very distant objects can appear very near and vice versa, for we can cut glasses in such sort and dispose them in such a manner in relation to our sight and external objects that the rays are broken and refracted in the direction which we wish. So that we shall see an object near or remote, under whatever angle we wish, and thus at the most incredible distance read the most minute letters or count the grains of sand. In this way we may also make the sun, the moon, and the stars descend by bringing their figures nearer the earth."

Bacon is never tired of pointing out that withal he is only at the beginning of the possibilities of science. "Nothing in human inventions is final and perfect," he says, quoting Seneca approvingly. "The most recent ages are always the most enlightened "; therefore, "Let not man boast or extol his knowledge. What he knows is little to what he takes on credit, less to that of which he is ignorant. He is mad who thinks highly of his ' Yet wisdom; most mad who vaunts it as a wonder.' he predicts great things from the advance of scientific knowledge, and looks forward to a time when "There shall be rowing without oars and sailing without sails; carriages which shall roll along with unimagined speed with no cattle to drag them; instruments to fly with, with which a man shall, by a spring, move artificial wings, beating the air like the wings of birds; a little mechanism three fingers long, which shall raise or lower enormous weights; a machine to enable a man to walk on the bottom of the sea and over the surface of waves without danger, and bridges over rivers which shall rest neither on piles nor columns." So dreams the imprisoned monk in his cell—a dream based upon the possession of much knowledge, much insight into the nature of things; a dream that after ages saw partly realised in fact.

A study of Roger Bacon irresistibly suggests his Elizabethan namesake, Francis Bacon; and the suggestion is accentuated by the close likeness of much of their writings, although the comparison is not always favorable to the later of the two. What Roger lacked in epigrammatical force he more than atoned for by the greater inventiveness of his mind and the greater originality of his genius. One can hardly imagine Roger Bacon in the place of Francis rejecting the Copernican astronomy, or looking with disfavor upon the use of instruments or mathematics in science. But in actual teaching the monk often antedates his namesake. Francis Bacon's "four species of idols which beset the human mind" are anticipated by Roger with four stumbling blocks to truth-the influence of authority, of custom, of undisciplined senses, and of Authority, of custom, of undisciplined senses, and of the concealment of ignorance by a pretence of wisdom. Francis's epigram, "The old age is the youth of the world," is forestalled by Roger with, "No doubt the ancients are worthy of all respect and gratitude for having opened the way to us. But, after all, the ancients were men, and have often been mistaken; indext, they have examinited all the more errors just indeed, they have committed all the more errors just because they are ancients, for in matters of learning the youngest are in reality the oldest." A good lengthy list of parallelisms between the two has been compiled by Forster in his Mohammedanism Unveiled, where he charges Francis with having borrowed largely from his predecessor. Hallam says the resemblance between the two is "most remarkable"; and Lewes declares that, "had there been on external grounds the shadow of a probability, there would have been on internal grounds the strongest evidence of Francis Bacon's plagiarism." between the two writers. Roger Bacon's works, although not printed, circulated in MS., and there is nothing new in one writer borrowing from another without confessing his obligation. To return to the man. What I think one may reasonably assume some connection to cut short Bacon's imprisonment is unknown, but he was released in 1267. For ten years Bacon managed to clude his enemies. But the Franciscans were good haters, and had long memories. In 1278 Jerome of Ascoli, General of the Order, held a chapter at Paris for the purpose of considering the various heresies that were troubling the Church. Bacon was cited to appear on the general charge of holding and teaching suspected doctrines. Once more he passed into a long imprisonment, the precise duration of which is unknown. He was at liberty fourteen years afterwards, 1202, and engaged in a great work, interrupted by death, and of which there remained only fragments. He died, most probably, in 1204, and was buried in the Grey Friars Church, Oxford.

The Church buried both the man and his writings. For centuries his writings were only known to a learned few in the form of manuscripts. To the mass of the people his name lingered on in popular legends as an old-time wonder-worker—half real, half mythical. It was not until nearly 450 years after his death that his Opus Majus was translated into English by Dr. Samuel Jebb; not for a hundred years later (1859) did the Opus Minus appear in an English dress.

In the whole history of Christianity there is not interest more disgraceful than its treatment of this thirteent century scholar. One-fourth of his life spent in prise prohibited by his Order from writing under penalty of "many days' fasting on bread and water," his instruments seized manuscripter of and water, "his instruments seized, manuscripts destroyed—no man err worked under more discouraging conditions than be We can well understand his plaintive cry, that "It is a account of the ignorance of these with whem I have account of the ignorance of those with whom That had to deal that I have not been able to accompliant more." After forty years of labor and self-sacrificabeggared by his studies, Bacon found himself "unheard forgotten, buried," and died with the trouble-laden lament, "I repent that I have given myself so much trouble for the good of mankind." The name of Roger Bacon should bring a blush to the face of even Christian, and serve as a new inspiration to the minute Christian, and serve as a new inspiration to the minute every Freethinker every Freethinker.

One is led to think of what might have been like had dream of what the world might now have been like had the Church smoothed the the Church smoothed the way for the struggling thinks instead of weighting his limbs with chains and clogs in his mind with care. To what height of civilisation might the race have climbed bod the traine of energy. might the race have climbed had the centuries of energy expended in fighting an increase of the centuries of church expended in fighting an ignorant and tyrannical Church been devoted to the accurate been devoted to the acquisition of light-spreading me giving knowledge! The Church pursued a different policy. It strove to crush knowledge to the state It strove to crush knowledge with the state k civilisation by the to check civilisation by the murder of those who amount to promote its growth. Happily, it met with but partial success. It did crush many to its substantiated the lives of success. It did crush many; it embittered the lives of many more. Withal, the tide of civilisation flowed on knowledge grew "from more to invisit this wide" knowledge grew "from more to more," and this wide freer knowledge has enabled us to rescue the name of Roger Bacon from the more to rescue the name of Roger Bacon from the neglect of centuries and be obloquy of the Church and all of centuries and the obloquy of the Church, and place it first on the roll of a new of those who strove to bring about the dawn of a new day.

The Prince of Peace.

A ONCE-CELEBRATED theatrical manager explained certain of his financial reverses to the state chakespeare of his financial reverses by declaring that Shakespear spelt Bankruptcy. He was right as far as his out in fated Shakespearean revivale but wrong in fated Shakespearean revivals had gone, but wrong the fated shakespearean revivals had gone, but wrong them. His was but a limited them. His was but a limited experience upon which he declaration that generalisation that an analysis and gone, but and ying he base that generalisation; but when we parodying bis declaration, assert that Christianity spells inconsistence we have over eighteen hundred wars of experience point to with we have over eighteen hundred years of experience point to, with the additional of years of experience in the viol point to, with the additional fact that, from the rectification in the of rectification of the set point to, with the additional fact that, from the retining nature of things, there is no possibility of rectification in the future. And we do assert that the histor the Christendom, the whole theory and practice of time Christian faith, since its foundation to the present of and every reasonable presumption in regard to that and every reasonable presumption in regard to the presence of the future, afford abundant justification for assering that christianity spells incomparison on that ground that the presence of Christianity spells Inconsistency, and on that ground How and and condemned

How else could it be when Christian teachings the basis of Christianity as found in the New Testament and, to a large extent, by endorsement in the moreover, the character of the Founder of the is remembrate restament—are inconsistent in themselves, and when moreover, the character of the Founder of the is remarkable chiefly for its incongruous feature intelligible enough, perhaps, in a merely human provide authoritative utterances and in the conduct of one have is said to have i authoritative utterances and in the conduct of one who presented is said to have brought a Divine message, and to have presented a perfect example

The fact has often been pointed out that we have the Gospels two Christs—one the meek and lorg virit other haughty, arrogant, vituperative, and unforget One is the Prince of Peace preaching love and goe to all men, the other breathing a message of the sword, not unwittingly or reluctantly, whom a peace "Think not," he said, "that I am come to send on earth ; I came not to send peace, but a spic later I am come I hink not," he said, "that I am come to send r or on earth; I came not to send peace, but a sword iter I am come to set a man at variance against his ghier and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter am come to set a man at variance against his laber and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter in-law against her mother-in-law. in-law against her mother-in-law.

nothi

upon That to be him to have rears of space of the state of

NOVEMBER 26, 1899.

shall be they of his own household " (Matthew x. 34-36). The Christian household--in which must be included the pious Boers, as well as their loving brethren in Crist, the pious Britishers—are at the present moment engaged, tooth and nail, in fulfilling the prediction of the great Head of their Church. With bombardments, sieges, sorties, sharp-shooting, "splendid" cavalry and bayonet charges—with lyddite, dynamite, and all the destructive appringe and according of war—they are afforddestructive engines and agencies of war-they are affording the latest exemplification of this Gospel, which is at once a gospel of peace and war, goodwill and the sword; which is simultaneously to bind all men in the bonds of love and to increase on the simultaneously to bind all men in the bonds of love, and to involve them in internecine conflict. The same D: same Prince of Peace, who came not to bring peace, but a sword, makes peace, who came not to bring peace, but a sword, makes confusion worse confounded by declaring that they make sword. that they who take the sword shall perish by the sword. The same Prince of Peace, who enjoins non-resistance of evil, affords an example of how it is to be done by fying intervention and driving ying into a towering rage and upsetting and driving out of the Temple the money-changers and "those that sold doves," denouncing, in his meek and lowly way, those tradesmen as "thieves." No doubt Kruger depoutly believes that at this moment he is following devoully believes that at this moment he is following the Division out of his the Divine example by endeavoring to whip out of his Republic the apple by endeavoring to solution rather Republic those whom he regards as Ootlanders rather than as Outlose whom he regards as Ootlanders rather there are the second greater the second g than as Outlanders—worse intruders and greater thieves than those of the Temple, inasmuch as they are money-stablers and sell diamonds stabbers rather than money-changers, and sell diamonds

The so-called Prince of Peace (with a sword in his hand) has much to answer for, if he only knew. The best thing that can be said for him is that he never anticipated the effect of him teachings on the temporal affairs of the effect of his teachings on the temporal affairs of the world centuries after his death—that he never drose world centuries after his death—that he ^{never} dreamt of all the religious wars, crusades, ^{nassacree} massacres, and persecutions which would be prosecuted in his name to persecutions which would be prosecuted his name, blotting the pages of history with blood— peace would prove when his followers were incited, as than religious fonctions or pious hate. He thought than religious fanaticism or pious hate. He thought mediate disciples shared that belief. The sword that he had in his mind in bellicose moments, was only to the had in his mind, in bellicose moments, was only to wielded is mind, in bellicose moments, was only to be wielded in his mind, in bellicose moments, was only still to exist the little space of time that the world had still to exist. Possibly, he merely anticipated domestic devise. The Possibly, he merely anticipated domestic day, and with hothing but the most unsatisfactory traditions to go The misfortune is that at this day, and with but the upon, it is difficult to determine what he did mean. That is difficult to determine what he did means to be a Second Coming of Christ, if only to enable to explain what he meant when he was supposed tim to explain what he meant when he was supposed lo have been here before.

^{vave} been here before. ^{vave}, indeed, would be an opportune time for him to ^{this} dreadful would be an opportune to rights for a million dreadful war, and put things to rights for a million of years or so, or, at any rate, for such time as may function of so, or, at any rate, for such time as may function of so, or at any rate, and so that alas. el years or so, or, at any rate, for such time as may funfure pending his reappearance in State with the celestial ^{apse} pending his reappearance in State with the cerestrum ^{funfare} that is to announce the great Assize. But, alas, ^{there} is no indicate the intention to turn-up or drop there is no indication of his intention to turn-up or drop ber in the indication of his intention to turn-up or drop Though an almighty down, or in any way intervene. Though an almighty owers of Peace, with no obligation to consult treaty and he is content to let the war proceed. His There of Peace, with no obligation to consult treaty owers he is content to let the war proceed. His peals, Possibly, after all, we have mistaken his real so equivocal, just as were the prayers of many of the lin there the war commenced. ^{clerey} before the war commenced. In default of his reappearan

^{apparently} as far off as ever—we can only fall back on The sas to what is the real Gospel he has left us. default of his reappearance—oft-predicted, but rently as far of ^{buises} as far off as ever—we can only fan the ^{buises} as to what is the real Gospel he has left us-^{buise} plous believe is the real Gospel he has left us-The pious as to what is the real Gospel he has left us offertory, believer, having paid his money (to the Quaker, and believe that the spirit and essence of transt teaching is diametrically opposed to war under arright stances that these who engage in it incur that the spine of that eventually the block of face an offended Deity, that ventually they will have to face an offended Deity, expressly location of the shedding of blood there are believe that peace at any price is not the short of the shedding of the shedding of blood there are believe that peace at any price is not the short of the shedding of the shedding of blood there are believe that peace at any price is not the short of the shedding of the shedding of the shedding short of the shedding of blood there are believe that peace at any price is not the short of the shedding of the shedding of the shedding short of the shedding of the shedding of the shedding of the short of the shedding of the shedding of the shedding of the short of the shedding of the shedding of the shedding of the shedding of the short of the shedding of the short of the shedding of moment for decision arrives. Then, if so minded, he takes up arms, Gospel or no Gospel, and saddles all the responsibility on the Almighty, who-the spring being touched—begins, automaton-like, to "move in his own mysterious way, and to work out his plans with unerring and unfathomable wisdom."

Taking the history of Christendom from its earliest stages down to the present week, it cannot be said that the world has much profited by the appearance of the Prince of Peace on our sublunary sphere. Is it likely that things would have been any worse if he had stayed away? One thing is certain-there would have been no Christian inconsistency, hypocrisy, and cant, and that would have been something to be thankful for.

FRANCIS NEALE.

Notes by the Way.

I HAVE just concluded a fortnight's provincial tour, having in that time visited Glasgow, Renfrew, Airdree, Motherwell, Carluke, Aberdeen, Dundee, and Liverpool. I found that the "God" Mars was in evidence against me the whole time, for the war in the Transvaal seemed to be the principal topic engaging public attention wherever I went. People, as a rule, did not appear to take a dispassionate view of the situation; they were either excited by a high state of war fever, or their judgments were impaired by an undue passion for peace under any circumstances. As the war is the question of the hour, and as my view of it has been repeatedly asked, I may here note that I do not think the present is an opportune time to discuss the justice or otherwise of the present conflict with the Boers. There is no doubt in my mind that the action, or non-action, of our Government contributed in a great measure to the outbreak; but the real causes of the war extend farther back than the present administration. However, the point with me just now is that Kruger declared war upon us, and thereby placed thousands of British lives in danger, A defensive policy was therefore forced upon us, and, in my opinion, it is our duty to render all the aid we can to our soldiers in the Transvaal, and to do what is possible to alleviate the sorrows of their relatives at home. When the strife is over, and the passion of the hour has passed, every effort should be made to prevent the recurrence of a war which, whoever is to blame, is a fearful calamity and a disgrace to our boasted civilisa-tion. It is a terrible indictment of the influence of the alleged "Prince of Peace" that two Christian peoples should be engaged in brutal warfare, making widows and orphans, and rendering thousands of homes the abodes of the direst misery and desolation. Perhaps Christ was not far wrong in saying : "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth ; I came not to send peace, but a sword."

During my forty years of propagandism I never experienced such a continuation of tempestuous weather as existed during my recent fortnight's tour. The rain which poured in torrents, and the wind which blew The rain hurricanes, very much affected my audiences, particu-larly in the outlying districts of Scotland. Still, in Glasgow, Dundee, and Aberdeen the evening gatherings were large and very enthusiastic. In fact, it would be almost impossible to have had a warmer reception than that which was afforded me at all my meetings. The Glasgow Branch of the N. S. S. deserves all praise for the excellent propagandist work it is doing, not only in Glasgow, but also in the small surrounding places. Our movement is making rapid progress in Scotland. During my stay in Aberdeen and Dundee two additional branches of the N. S. S. were formed, and every indicabranches of the N. S. S. were formed, and every indica-tion was given that they would be successful. I endeavored to impress upon our friends in each place that the veterans in the Cause should continue to co-operate with the young blood. The union of the two is necessary to perpetuate the useful work now being done by the various branches throughout the country. It was encouraging to see so many young men joining our ranks, and to notice the large number of the wives and daughters of the members who attended these of course, to be determined in strict with his own desires when the critical approval is given of the two organisations recently formed in London by the President of the N.S.S. for the purpose of extending the usefulness of Secular work. The one great want felt is music at our meetings, and personally I should feel delighted to see the want supplied. The Secular Society, Limited, when it acquires a few more legacies and bequests, will probably consider this important question, with a view of seeing what can be done in the matter.

I ask our friends throughout the country to avail themselves of the present activity in our movement. With the advent of the New Year, strenuous efforts in the field of propagandism should be made. There is plenty of room for more destructive and constructive work to be done; there are hosts of willing workers ready to do it; and it is to be hoped that ample means will be forthcoming to enable such a desirable object to CHARLES WATTS. be accomplished.

The Absent-Minded Beggar.

(With pious apologies to Rudyard Kipling.)

WHEN you've shouted "Rule Britannia !" when you've sung. "Gawd save the Queen"—
When you've finished making faces with your mouth—
Will you kindly pray to God that He will make it "all serene" For the fifty thousand slashers ordered South ?
He's an absent-minded beggar—always been so, up to date— But all of you must take Him as you find Him;
He has sworn to answer pray'r, but He's forgotten to of late— So you'd better shout and "holler" to remind Him.

Chorus.—Duke's son, cook's son, son of a girl that "spins"— Punctured by the bullets from the guns of Mr. K.

Britons are doing their Maker's work-their Maker should thicken their skins. Down at once on your "shivery-shakes," and pray, pray, pray !

There are boys from England, boys from Wales, and boys from Ireland too, And some boys that don't wear "togs," and never did; There are single boys, and married boys gone out to fight old "Kru,"

And there's many a one, alas ! that's but a kid. They've a Father up in Heaven, but it's miles from where they've gone,

And an absent-minded beggar they will find Him : It was He that planned the war, but He'll forget the war is on If you do not shout and "holler" to remind Him.

Chorus .- Cook's son, Duke's son, son of a bloated

Earl

Earl (Fifty thousand British slashers gone to Table Bay !); Each and all of you now, for the sake of the Son of the Carpenter's girl, Kneel and bow till your backbones ache, and pray, pray !

There are parsons here in thousands-thick as beetles, so to speak-

And they ought to go to Africa to spout. They're engaged on "active service" only once or twice a week,

Week, So the order ought to be "send 'em out." He's an absent-minded beggar is the Father of us all, So the parsons ought to be there to remind Him That Tommy's skin's not thick enough to stop each rifle ball

From the right and left, in front of, and behind him !

Chorus.—Duke's son, Cook's son, son of the Lord No-Zoom (Fifty thousand British slashers gone to Table Bay !); Hardly a blessed parson there to guard 'em from Mr. Oom; Down at once on your "shivery skakes," and pray, pray pray !

and pray, pray, pray !

Let us manage to get round the Lord and "kid" Him to His

And tell Him that we'd very much prefer That He backed the British Empire and consigned old Kruger's

To the clime that's always torrid as it were. He's an absent-minded beggar, and He may forget it all, So you'd better keep on shouting to remind Him That "Codlin" is His friend, not "Short," and say "God damn old Paul,

And the troops he's got in front of and behind him."

Chorus .- Cook's son, Duke's son, son of a millionaire (Fifty thousand British slashers gone to Table Bay !);

All of 'em doing their Maker's work with maxim guns and prayer; They've plenty of guns, but down on your knees, and pray, pray, pray.

Ess JAY BEE.

Acid Drops.

The end of the world did not happen on November 15 few silly people, like the wide-mouthed dupes of Prophet Baxter, were frightened a little by the prediction; but other people kept calm, and went about their business and picaure as usual. Here in England the Leonids did not make so much as a decent show. The fog came and hid everything indeed, a wag said it was thick enough to hide the end of the world if it happened.

Over in Russia, however, where the people are so much more superstitious, hundreds of thousands spent three main in the open air, in spite of the intense cold. They were some that the Leonids meant the end of the world, or at least some terrible calamities such as universal earthquakes. terrible calamities such as universal earthquakes. from parents actually killed their children to save them perishing in the catastrophe. Even in the city of Odesa according to the Daily News correspondent, a man's for children had to be taken from him by force to save them lives.

Such are the beautiful and beneficent effects of superstitute Ay, some will say, but superstition is not religion. In it was. Superstition is only religion out of fashion. It superstition of to-day was the religion of yesterday; religion of to-day will be the superstition of to-morrow.

The Second Adventists in America—and they are rule numerous body—have often expected the end of the word and the second coming of Christ. A few years ago they got their white ascension robes ready. Christ whise enterprising elder, meaning to gain the best possible such climbed up a tree, and when the clock struck twelve jumped. There was no Christ that night, but the enterpris-ing elder was carried home with a broken leg.

One fatal result has followed the recent scare as to the end of the world. An elderly lady, a well-known resident at Nice, died of fright on the 13th inst., in spite of the efforts of four doctors. She was convinced that, as predicted the indeed, the end of the world for her. If she had but possess her soul in patience till the next morning, she might have round again.

The Globe is responsible for the statement that a country paper, which professed a profound beliet in Dr. Fall's theory of the destruction of the world by Biela's comet, pablished a list of fixtures for the week. Among them appeared following : "Menday, 10.15 p.m., the end of the weil Wednesday, the Queen goes to Bristol." The joke will pass, but it would puzzle the Globe to find that

Ingersoll was once libelled by a Rev. Mr. Dixon, parti-we believe, in relation to the great orator's views as well, sinlessness of suicide under certain hopeless conditions, we wonder if it is the same Rev. Mr. Dixon who extend the religious world in America by advorating the extend-tion of habitual criminals. This is what he is reported to humanity demands that in order to oblice at a high source of crime the individual must die. Imprint the exten-life would be a grievous error. It is not right the exten-tion these confirmed criminals. The guide the exten-tion guide the extension of the second the extension of the extension

This is not very accurate psychology. The real state the death sentence is having to die. There is little difference, as far as suffering is concerned, between one of of execution and another. The trouble is having iate However, if the Rev. Mr. Dixon's plous suggestion of the United States. It is a post which a clergyman would great éclat. We never had a very high opinion of the leaders perf. Irish papers. Nor, apparently, has the Bishop of Derf.

He logi chu lead ing bett Swe T of wan but cann neve

N

Very In pany or th travi ticka satis lebos fear, wou for : the that day.

W

othes this and in York Wolf Wolf Wolf Uparti there of the ion

Midda " wood Norean Palasta and the Analysis and a start and a sta

NOVEMBER 26, 1899.

a la la

un so Si La

山田記

武町田

三日三日

11 10

加加加

1213

He told the members of the Dublin Trinity College Theo-The told the members of the Dublin Trinity College Inter-legical Society, the other day, that there were in Dublin durches quite as good sermons preached as there were heading articles written in the papers. This is really play-ing the Dublin press down very low. If the leaders are no tetter than the sermons, there ought to be immediately some weeping changes on the staffs.

The Bishop of Derry further assured the good young men of Trinity College that "the influence of religion is not waing." This bold assertion is quite contrary to the fact, but no matter. There is a plucky ring about it that one cannot but admire. Never say die, my good young friends; never admit that you are being beaten until you come to your very last gasn. very last gasp.

Instead of rendering unto the Great Central Railway Com-pany that which belonged to them—namely, a third-class ticket or the equivalent fare—Mr. Samuel Harley Redfern, who had tavelled on the line to Marylebone, offered to read to the satisfactory, Mr. Redfern has been hailed before the Mary-bone Stipendiary, who has remanded him. He has no fear, however, though cast into prison, for, he says, "God or a great many other persons, but we must not prejudge that this godly man made the journey in question on a Sun-day. Instead of rendering unto the Great Central Railway Com-

Why should the poor people, who undertake to foretell ther folks' future by means of palmistry, be prosecuted in and ministers engaged in doing pretty much the same thing by means equally reliable? Mrs. Mary Claire St. Ledger lork his been prosecuted for fortune-telling by palmistry at volverhampton. One of the magistrates did not see any there, if it is not an offence for sky-pilots to wheedle hundreds tion as to the hereafter. tion as to the hereafter.

Harcus S. Berginnan, honorary translator of the Viddish ble and missionary to the Jews in London, has been He said : "No doubt God, working in his own mysterious and was bringing home to the minds of the Jews, by the which they committed in condemning our Lord."

Now, really, what can be said of such a hideous sugges-bringing the lesson home? Mr. Berginnan's God must be Almighty fiend as well as a fool.

The Rev. W. H. Pinkham, Baptist minister, of Colorado, been deposed on the ground "that he recognises a human, Remeeting the scriptures, and that his doctrine of the in the corporeal elements committed to the tomb." If he ad lived not so very many centuries ago, and within the ad live corporeal elements committed to the tomb." If he is dive corporeal elements committed to the tomb." If he is dive not so very many centuries ago, and within the mater alive. How Mother Church, he would have been him in kingdom come.

A decomposition of the second state of the sec

Augustation of the statement be correct. Probably a number of their professional shackles if suitable secular open-But what :

But what is a poor cleric to do who finds that his training, the thas not unfitted him, has certainly not equipped him, for the theorem competition of a worldly calling, especially in the United States or the colonies? And the difficulties are still the unnaturally he sticks to his post. It is his cross.

who, a little time ago, approved of a seven-year-old child being beaten at his Church Sunday-school until there were weals on the poor child's body and legs—the said child, how-ever, being only a wretched little pauper placed out at a cottage home. On the strength of Solomon's injunction, he declared that the lad deserved a "jolly good caining." Since this delightful episode, the Rev. Savory has been displaying himself as an object for further contempt.

The Urban Council, it seems, have placed a hydrant near the vicarage wall. This, he says, is a deliberate insult to himself. We don't see it. The Urban Council may have done it out of kindness, believing that such a hot-tempered gentleman might be benefited by having something handy wherewith to cool his heated brow. He says he is "perfectly certain the people of Hessle would rise en masse and say, 'We will not allow our vicar to be annoyed by any such thing being placed opposite his dwelling.'" O Lord, gie us a good con-ceit of ourselves ! The people of Hessle, if they interfered at all, would, we should think, utilise that hydrant on the rev. gentleman in a way that would be salutary, if unpleasant.

The "Tongues of Fire" have been wagging at Exeter Hall, though, perhaps, with more heat than sense. The great Reader Harris, Q.C., has been "putting the case" for that precious Pentecostal League. He has been asking the Lord to so whip the Boers that further bloodshed shall be avoided. Poor Kruger! to have to fight his own Lord as well as Redvers Buller. From Boers to unbelievers is an easy transition for Reader Harris, and he said he had been well as Redvers Buller. From Boers to unbelievers is an easy transition for Reader Harris, and he said he had been told that "not one church-member in a hundred believed that prayers were answered. He met a great many people who admitted that they were no longer Christians. When he urged them to become such again, their answer invariably was 'never no more.'"

Further, he assured the Church that, unless it accepted the Pentecostal spirit, "its candlestick would be removed." Dreadful possibility! Especially for those Ritualists who would sooner part with life than their candlesticks. In the terrible event of the Lord thus "dowsing the glim," one would be inclined to think of that once familiar query: "Where was Moses when the light went out?"

That clerical snob of the very first water, the vicar of Windsor, announces that "the Queen and the Prince of Wales have been graciously pleased to accept copies of the prayer and hymn written by the Rev. Arthur Robins [i.e., himself] for use as a pocket pistol by the Household Cavalry in the face of their enemies."

The Westminster Gazette, quoting the announcement, says : "We are sure that the prayer and hymn were not so described by her Majesty. Mr. Robins has on a previous occasion dis-tinguished himself by his intemperance of language about the Boers. He hardly improves his position by becoming patentee of this form of pocket pistol."

The Oxford University Press has printed, Khaki bound, 40z. Bibles for the use of our troops. It is to be hoped that Kruger has made equal provision for his men, though, probably, he relies upon the fact that each Boer has a Bible of his own, and does not need, like Tommy Atkins, to be supplied with a copy of that precious work. The Boers carry the Bible in their heads rather than in their knapsacks. T. A. would sooner have 40z. of 'bacca than 40z. of Bible.

The Empress of Germany has come to the rescue of the Bible, nobly and majestically vindicating it from ridicule. A very proper step indeed, and deserving the approval of "myself und Gott." It seems that there has been a tax imposed recently on the inhabitants of Berlin for the purpose of building Lutheran churches in the city. The municipality declares it is unfair to tax Catholics, Jews, and Freethinkers to build churches with which they have no connection. Dr. Preuss, a Jew and tutor in the University, in ridiculing the proposal, parodied a well-known passage in Job, by saying : "His Excellency gave, and his Excellency taketh away; blessed be the name of his Excellency." Very innocent; there have been quite as bad things said in the Freethinker.

The Empress has promptly written, expressing regret that a member of the Council "should have thought fit to throw ridicule on certain passages in the Bible and hymn-book." Beneath the weight of this august censure poor Preuss has sunk—crushed to the earth, damned everlastingly in Berlin, perhaps doomed hereafter. perhaps doomed hereafter.

The University authorities, now that their attention has been drawn to the matter by an expression of opinion from so high a quarter, are dutifully and inexpressibly shocked. They are, therefore, proposing to "discipline" Dr. Preuss. He now, probably, wishes Job and the whole Bible at the bottom of the sea, and the super-sensitive Empress with it.

bottom of the sticks to his post. It is his cross. From the recent decision of that embodiment of imbecility, From the recent decision of that embodiment of imbecility, the Licensing Committee of the London County Council, it would seem that we have indeed gone back to the time of Cromwell, of whom we have lately heard so much. Modern regulations from Spring-gardens are quite in the spirit of the enactments of the Commonwealth. Here is one of the latter : "Anyone found idly standing or walking on the street in sermon time, or playing at any game upon the Sabbath or fast-day, shall be fined two-and-sixpence, or lie in prison till be pay the same." he pay the same.'

"The Power of Prayer" is the title of last week's short sermon in Lloyd's Newspaper. The writer is the Right Rev. the Bishop for North and Central Europe. We have not the pleasure of knowing his name, but we beg to remark that he has a tidy-sized diocese. Perhaps that accounts for his hasty and superficial thinking. Merely to go round such a diocese is enough for one man to do, even with divine assistance. Hard thinking, in addition, must be an utter impossibility.

Well, this Bishop of etc., etc., states that at the time of General Gordon's death at Khartoum he "saw in the window General Gordon's death at Khartoum he "saw in the window of a small Atheist's bookshop at Brighton a picture repre-senting Gordon lying dead on the Residency stairs, and beneath it the words, 'Thus the Christian God answers the Christians' prayers.'" Upon this incident the Bishop of etc., etc., founds the following remarks : "Poor fool who says in his heart there is no God. How little he knew how General Gordon longed for death, prayed for it, as a letter in my possession, and many of his letters, testify.....And his prayer was granted—granted to the full, poor atheist."

This right reverend man of God refers, of course, to the Freethinker. But he misses the point of our cartoon. The satire was aimed at the Christians at home. They prayed and prayed and prayed for Gordon, and when the curtain lifted the answer was a bloody and dishonored corpse. Let us pray !

We are told by this right reverend man of God that Gordon prayed for death himself. If that be so, it is wonderful how he received God's reply. According to Neufeld, he killed at least a dozen of his assailants, using sword and revolver until he was cut down dead. That is how Gordon accepted the death he prayed for so ardently.

This, also, must be said. If it be true that Gordon prayed for death and got it, why did so many Christians talk about "avenging Gordon," and about his being "avenged," when all those thousands of Dervishes lay dead on the desert sands, and when the Mahdi's tomb was desecrated at Omdurman? Was it not sheer, flat, rank blasphemy to "avenge" an act of Cod 2 God ?

Finally, we have to remind this Bishop of etc., etc., that the cartoon he refers to was not atheistic at all. It might have been designed by a Deist. It was directed against the Christian God-a deity who has made the most lavish promises to answer prayer, and has never yet been known to keep a single one of them.

The father of Judge Koch, who was wounded and taken prisoner at Elandslaagte, was nominally in command, but "instead of fighting he read the Bible and prayed "—says the Daily Chronicle war correspondent. And what was the result? One bullet passed through the old man's shoulder, and another through his groin. "So he lay still and read no more." What a touching answer to prayer !

Mr. John McCormac, an excise officer, has lost his wife. Mr. John McCormac, an excise officer, has lost his wife. It appears that he had committed adultery with the servant girl. His wife found him late at night in the girl's bedroom, but he assured her that there was "nothing wrong." A court of justice, however, has naturally discounted this sweet assur-ance, and Mrs. McCormac has obtained a decree nisi in the Divorce Division. After the decree was pronounced, Mr. John McCormac's piety waxed strong within him, and impelled him to express great anxiety about his eldest son, ten years of age, whom he wanted to have brought up as a Roman Catholic, like himself. But the unsympathetic judge gave the mother the custody of the children. the custody of the children.

Mr. C. Napier Bell, in a new book entitled Tangweera, describes his "Life and Adventures among Gentle Savages." These gentle savages are the Mosquito Indians, who, after two centuries of British protection, were handed over to the rule of the two Spanish Republics of Honduras and Nicaragua. The Spanish priests have been hard at work upon them, and this is the result :—" The once-happy Indians, handed over to their old enemies the Spaniards, are now worried to frenzy by taxes, and Catholic priests dispensing the dubious blessings of civilisation, accompanied, as usual, by disease, demoralisa-tion, and death."

Sacrifice is still performed on Mount Gerizim by the Samaritans. The rite has been witnessed by Mrs. Margaret Thomas, who describes it in Two Years in Palestine and Syria. While the lambs were being roasted in the fire, after buing slain by the High Priest, the Samaritans sat round praying. Then they broke into groups of seven, the reast flesh was placed before them, and they tore it to pieces and ate it. Fragments were sent to the tents of the women, and the bones and refuse were carefully collected and burnt. Yo doubt such scenes were frequent in ancient times under the doubt such scenes were frequent in ancient times under the sublime worship of Jehovah.

The notion that Christianity introduced new principles of humanity into jurisprudence is historically absurd. Y wonder the Daily News, in a recent review of a work of Byzantine Constantinople, points out that "blinding was perhaps as common among Christians as among indep potentates. Capricious alternations between vindicidenes and leniency were as common among the former as anong and leniency were as common among the former as anong the latter." the latter.'

Fun indulges its feeble wit at the expense of the late Charles Bradlaugh. It represents Lord Salisbury suggeting a statue to Bradlaugh by way of a set-off to Lord Rosebery's statue of Cromwell. Our professionally facetious contem-porary doesn't see that this is a handsome compliment to the great Radical-Atheist. In spite of all the "loyalists" may asy, Cromwell was one of the foremost men in English history. Admire him or not on principle, you cannot den the place he fills—and keeps. And to bracket Bradlaugh with him is anything but an insult to Bradlaugh. Fut with have to try again.

Gladstone's opinion of Cromwell, by the way, was character-istic. According to Sir Edward Russell, the Grand Old Mar remarked to a Cromwell biographer, "I should not have said myself that he was a very great man—no greater, for instante than the late Lord Althorpe." Historical criticism could hardly sink lower than that. hardly sink lower than that.

The Edinburgh Evening News is down on the article Encyclopardia Biblica, with special reference to the article on "Bartimeus." This was the name of the bind gentleman to whom Jesus gave good eyesight. It appears however, from this new clerical work that the biographers of Jesus were mistaken. What he gave to blind Bartimeus spiritual sight, and they wooden-headedly mate it will remarks that the story of the same writers about that Resurrection and Ascension "must be taken with substant grains of salt." But if the miracles of the New Testament are explained away, what is left to constitute in a super-matural revelation? No wonder the News as super-professors and clergymen are rapidly reaching the conduct of Tom Paine and Charles Bradlaugh." Good. But why Tom?

John M'Neill is a successful revivalist. A hoary-headed stockbroker explained to a North British Daily Mail man one of the secrets of this success. "Well," he said, "M not don't trouble us, at any rate, with the old hell. use the brimstone business as an accessory, and his Goal not of the cruel and remorseless kind. I have hopes, when how, that I will escape the roasting process."

Dr. Peters, of nigger-flogging fame, has discovered Ophic but it has been discovered so many times, and in so But places, that there is no need for much excitement. The Ophir really was in South Africa, the Anglo-Isratelle They another argument in favor of British supremacy there the tell us that Englishmen are Jews, descended from the de tribes, and that Oneen Victoria is the lineal descended tribes, and that Oneen Victoria is the lineal descended King David. How natural, then, that we should get out of King Solomon's mines. They never should have gone the family.

the lamily. Father Coupe, of the Society of Jesus, has an arment in fire Catholic Times on "Miracles." There is no argument in the tis a mere rhapsody for believers. Incidentally, the of the "twenty millions of martyrs" furnished by the of Christians. Well now, this number is distinctly certain all liars we prefer the big liar. He is most entered saw five hundred was an amusing little bear or the along after his Resurrection; but Paul the mardifier at each of and makes him appear unto five hundred mane and and and while you are about it you may as well write In this spirit we admire Father Coupe's martyrs. Of course they never existed with another martyrs. Of course they never existed with another martyrs. Of course they never existed on the difference martyrs. Of course they never existed the difference martyrs. Of course they never existed that his not martyrs. Martine father Coupe's martyrs agood, orthodox, credulous Catholic has his not well open, he swallows twenty million martyrs as easily and twenty.

Superintendent: "Yes, and where did John the "Quite live?" Scholar: "In the desert." Superintendent: "Quite right! And what do we call people who live in the desert?" Scholar: "Deserters."—Brooklyn Live

-

Afr

Ma

Τ.

W, Ex

> W, W.

E.

Τ.

Τ. S. ,

W. I

N, J.

A

PA

LR h

Ir

4 PR OR TH

Sci

1 ites

ind No the

i ot No on 西山

55 18

ıtë 場作 1-12

以山

15

1

Mr. Foote's Engagements.

Sunday, November 26, North Camberwell Hall ; 7.30, "Britishers and Boers : A Freethinker's View of the White War in South Africa,"

To Correspondents.

- MR. CHARLES WATTS'S LECTURING ENGAGEMENTS.—December 3. Athenneum Hall, London; 10, Manchester; 11, Bolton; 17, Manchester.—All communications for Mr. Charles Watts should be sent to him at 24 Carminia-road, Balham, S.W. If a reply is required, a stamped and addressed envelope must be enclosed. T. DUNBAP.—We take use latter in the spirit in which you wrote
- Tequired, a stamped and addressed envelope must be checked. T. DUNBAR, —We take your letter in the spirit in which you wrote it. Pleased to hear from an old reader like yourself. In the world of thought, as in the world of life, we must live and let live. You cannot think more highly of the late J. M. Wheeler than we do. Every word in his praise is grateful to our ears. W. P. Batter More the forever welcome batches of cuttings.

W. P. BALL.—Many thanks for your welcome batches of cuttings. JAY BEE.-We were wondering what had become of you. Glad to hear from you again.

W. SiMONS (Secretary) wishes to state that the Testimonial Fund on behalf of Mr. Fagan will remain open until December 9. W. Cox (1:10) Mr. Fagan will remain open until becomes 1; but,

- W. Cox (Liverpool).—No doubt the delay was in the post; but, whatever the explanation, zee are not responsible. Mr. Foote will gladly visit you in January. Choose your own Sunday, envy do it at once, and let him know.
- only do it at once, and let him know. VETTERLEIN, —Your last week's postcard was dated Tuesday, and bore Tuesday's postmark. Please note that announce-ments for insertion in the Freethinker must reach us at the T. JENKINSON.—Thanks for copy of the Clarion. Mr. Blatchford upon him. No doubt the differences amongst Socialists are as freat as those amongst other people. They are united on one main full reaction in the people. Frantiss, No doubt the differences amongst Socialists are an freat as those amongst other people. They are united on one point only, and that point is an ultimate one, for the far future ; paratively easy.

HUNT, -- Thanks. Cuttings are always welcome.

^{HUNT}, —Thanks. Cuttings are always welcome.
 ^S, F_{RANKLIN}, —Ingersoll's last lecture on What is Religion 2 is not out of print. There are plenty of copies left. Order of Mr.
 ^W, J. ILFORD

- J. ILFORD.—We have already noted that Dr. Tylor's Gifford Lectures will be published shortly. Certainly the book will be reviewed in our columns as soon as possible after its appear-ance.
- Ance, and the continues as soon and N.S.S. GENERAL FUND, --Miss Vance acknowledges :-- Gateshead Friend, re
- J. R. WHITELL. -- (1) The most serviceable translation of Plutarch (of course how (1) The most serviceable in "Bohn's Library." R. WHTELL,—(1) The most serviceable translation of Plutarch (of course you mean the Lives) is the one in "Bohn's Library." It is in four volumes, at 3s. 6d. each, subject to the usual 25 per Long, the historian and translator of Marcus Aurelius and Mr. Stewart. Clouch's edition of the "Dryden" translation, is more expensive. The fine old translation by North was not have not seen the book you mention, but it can hardly be com-of many hundred pages. The price was 15s., but we believe J. SHERWIN.—Mr. Foote's Bible Romances will shortly be intered for selection. 4
- I. SHERWIN. Mr. Foote's Bible Romances will shortly be intended to add will be kept back to form part of another work. SERRECEIVED Areas Received to add will be kept back to form part of another work. Areas Received. Liberator-Boston Investigator-The Truth-sceler (New York)-Public Opinion-Awakener of India-Bran's Iconoclast-Free Society-Common Sense (Chicago) Lucifer-Der Arme Teufel-Freidenker-Torch of Reason-per-Progressive Thinker-Rockhampton Record-Isle of Mail-Hamilton Advertiser. 28 Ste for the Editor of the Freethinker should be addressed to

LetTreRs for the Editor of the Freethinker should be addressed to a Stonecutter electron of the Freethinker should be addressed to

- ²⁸ Stonecutter-street, London, E.C.
- ²⁸ Stoneculter-street, London, E.C. London, Where all letters should be addressed to Miss National Secular Society's office is at No. 377 Strand, Vance.
- vance, where all letters should be the being contrary to Post-Office regulations to announce on the wrapper when the subscription expires, subscribers will receive due, in a colored wrapper when their subscription is the first post LECTURE NOTICES must reach 28 Stonecutter-street by first post Tucsday, or they will not be inserted.

- ^{tucsday}, or they will not be inserted. ^{marking} who send us newspapers would enhance the favor by ^{marking} the passages to which they wish us to call attention. ^{marking} for literation of the second secon ^{marking} the passages to which they wish us to call attenue. ORDERS the passages to which they wish us to call attenue. Cutter for literature should be sent to Mr. R. Forder, 28 Stone-The
- Conter-street, E.C. Office, post free, at the following rates, prepaid :--One year, SCALE OF POST free, at the following rates, prepaid :--One year, SCALE OF ADVERTICE OF Thirty words, IS. 6d.; every suc-cent: ADVERTICE OF Thirty words, IS. 6d.; every suc-
- Scale Op ADVERTISEMENTS :- Thirty words, 1s. 6d.; every suc-Section of the section of the secti

Sugar Plums.

MR. FOOTE lectures in the Secular Hall, Camberwell, this MR. FOOTE lectures in the Secular Hall, Camberweil, this evening (Nov. 26). By special request he will take for his subject "A Freethinker's View of the White War in South Africa." We are informed that there is likely to be a large meeting and plenty of discussion—which, by the way, Mr. Foote rather likes. We understand that several young reformers, who have studied the South African question very profoundly, are thirsting to wash their spears in the Presi-tante blood. It is to be hoped he has enough to go round. dent's blood. It is to be hoped he has enough to go round.

Last Sunday evening Mr. Charles Watts lectured to a capital audience at Camberwell. His estimate of the grand character of Colonel Ingersoll was fully appreciated, and his entire lecture was enthusiastically applauded. Many strangers were present, and ladies formed a large section of the audience.

Mr. Cohen had a good audience at the Athenaum Hall on Mr. Conen had a good audience at the Athenaeum Hall on Sunday evening. He occupies the same platform again this evening (Nov. 26), and will doubtless have another good evening, perhaps even a better one. On the following Sunday (Dec. 5) Mr. Watts lectures there, and Mr. Foote will occupy the platform during the rest of the month.

The Secular Society, Limited, held its first Annual Members' Meeting at the Manchester Hotel on Wednesday evening, November 15. There was a fair attendance of London members. Country members were represented by proxies, most of them in favor of Mr. Foote. But there was proxies, most of them in favor of Mr. Foote. But there was no need to use these. No poll was taken; indeed, everything passed off with the greatest harmony. The Chairman read no need to use these. No poll was taken; indeed, everything passed off with the greatest harmony. The Chairman read the Report, which was accepted and ordered to be printed. A copy will be posted to every member, and will also appear in the Freethinker. Mr. Thomas Shore was elected a Director in place of Miss Annie Brown, who is unable to attend the Board meetings. With this exception the Board remains as it was Amount those present was Mr. Embleton who Board meetings. With this exception the Board remains as it was. Amongst those present was Mr. Embleton, who suggested that the members should give more in the way of donations, and added (what all believed) that he was ready to do his share. Mr. Moss proposed a vote of thanks to the Chairman, to whom the members, and the whole Secular party, were so much indebted. This was carried unanimously. A vote of thanks was also given to the Secretary.

Applications for Shares in the Freethought Publishing Company, Limited, are still coming in, but we should like to see them coming in a little faster. We beg all those who reckon themselves valid Freethinkers—that is, ready to do as well as believe-to fill in the Application Form at once, if they have not already done so, and forward it to the Company's secretary with the requisite remittance.

Newcastle-on-Tyne friends are requested to note that an important meeting will be held to-day (Nov. 26) at No. 1, Granger-street, at 3 p.m. Also that they are to have a visit from Mr. Percy Ward on the following Sunday. Mr. Ward lectures in the Co-operative Hall, Whitehall-road, Gateshead. Friends coming from a distance can be supplied with tea at the Party Caffic close by the Park Café close by.

The Newcastle Branch has received a very nice letter from Mrs. Ingersoll, expressing thanks for its message of sympathy on Colonel Ingersoll's death.

The Rockhampton Daily Record (Queensland) gives a three-column report of an eloquent address on Colonel Ingersoll by our old friend, Mr. Wallace Nelson. Mr. Nelson went out our old friend, Mr. Wallace Nelson. Mr. Nelson went out from England some thirteen years ago. The doctors thought he was booked as a consumptive, but they were mistaken. Anyhow, he is still alive and very active. Besides being a sterling advocate of Freethought, Mr. Nelson is a noted politician, working for the labor party and conducting the Pcople's Newspaper.

Mr. Nelson's People's Newspaper for October 13 is before us. After quoting from and condemning the Jingo press, Mr. Nelson writes : "It is pleasing to turn from the silly Jingoism of the daily Press to a really sane presentment of the case for the Outlanders." A long extract is then made from one of Mr. Foote's articles in the Freethinker, to which Mr. Nelson adds, "Now, I quite recognise the force of all this." At the same time, he argues that "There is no justification for war." Indeed, he says that "Mr. Foote puts the whole thing in a few words when he says : 'Let us not rush into the frightful crime of an avoidable war. Let patience go with firmness, and magnanimity with strength.'" Evidently our old friend has taken the trouble to read and understand what we wrote, which is more than some impatient Freethinkers have done at home. How refreshing it always is to meet with one who, if he differs from you, knows where you are and where he is, if he differs from you, knows where you are and where he is, and precisely why you and he do not stand quite together ! How blessed a thing is intellectual hospitality !

The Secular Almanack for 1900 is nearly ready for publica-tion. It will be on sale next week for certain. Orders should be placed at once with Mr. Forder. Besides the should be placed at once with Mr. Forder. Josades the usual supply of information, there are special articles by G. W. Foote, Charles Watts, C. Cohen, Francis Neale, Minnermus, and others. We may add that this Almanack is issued by the National Secular Society, and that all profit realised by the sale of it goes into the Society's exchequer. Those who buy the Almanack, therefore, help the movement while articles with the movement while getting their money's worth.

An Empress's Piety.

LETTER TO BERLIN TOWN COUNCIL.

The local topic of conversation here [Berlin] is a letter which The local topic of conversation here [Berlin] is a letter which Baron von Mirbach, of the Empress's Household, has written, on her Majesty's behalf, to the President of the Berlin Town Council. After thanking that body for its congratulations on her birthday, her Majesty expresses her regret that a controversy of many years' standing between the Town Council and the different parishes has not yet been settled, and then proceeds to say: "With deep grief her Majesty also here but a chort time are during your absence a techor controversy of many years' standing between the Town Council and the different parishes has not yet been settled, and then proceeds to say : "With deep grief her Majesty also learns that a short time ago, during your absence, a teacher of the University, a member of the Town Council, scoffed at sacred, evangelical, and Biblical words of comfort without being reprimanded, in a manner which must deeply shock all morals ; but, above all, Christian feelings. Her Majesty hopes that in time the good and true elements will succeed, next to the promotion of outward prosperity, in healing the many internal sores from which the Imperial capital suffers." This strange reprimand from the Empress refers to the following occurrence : At one of the sittings of the Town Council Dr. Preuss criticised the credulity and indolence of some members of that body, who trusted that the municipal authorities and the Minister would make things all right, and that, therefore, no one else need trouble about them. These people, he said, thought "His Excellency gave ; his Excellency." He then quoted the words of an old hymn. This was, to say the least, tactless. Dr. Preuss was immediately consured by the speakers who came after him, and he himself expressed his regret, saying that he did not intend to hurt anyone's feelings. He has, however, aroused Baron von Mirbach to write the letter, the reading of which caused enormous sensation. The Government, of course, has hastened to open a disciplinary inquiry against Dr. Preuss, to decide whether he has violated the dignity of his owtion as a teacher at the University. The controversy between the Town Council and the parishes to which the Empress's letter refers is also very interesting. The Orthodox discovered in the archives a forandenburg, the towns are obliged to build churches for the evangelical parishes. This three-hundred-years-old decree has now been declared to be still in force. The city of Berlin maintains that it is for the parishes to build their own churches, the treasury of the to

Cecil Rhodes' Religion.

Accorning to the Review of Reviews, the "Colossus of South Africa" is an Agnostic. Mr. Rhodes, we are told, although the son of a clergyman, is no great Churchman. His moral sense revolts against accepting the Divine origin of the Hebrew writings which exult over the massacre of the Amalekites. In the doctrine of eternal torment he is an out-and-out unbeliever. Upon many questions relating to the other world his one word is Agnostic—"I do not know." But on the question of hell he is quite sure he knows, and he knows that it is not true. Indeed, it is his one negative dogma, which he holds with astonishing vigor and certifude. dogma, which he holds with astonishing vigor and certitude.

Testimonial to Mr. John Fagan.

D. Colville, 158.; B. Hyatt, 28.; G. J. Holyoake, 28. (who wishes Mr. Fagan success, and says he would send more if he were richer); Chas. Watts, 28.; G. Ward and Miss Robins, 105.—GEORGE WRIGHT, Treasurer, Bradlaugh Club, "36 Newington Green-road, N.

"Skeletons in Parsonic Cupboards."

WITH this heading, the Church Gazette publishes the following editorial note on a little sketch contributed by me to the Freethinker of the 12th inst.:-

"Although, as we remark elsewhere in this issue, there may be no Atheists, there are plenty of sceptics, of whose views the Freethinker is, perhaps, the most pro-minent exponent. That journal, in the course of a genial article on 'The Country Parson,' treats our reverent friends to a little not unwholesome satire. In the course of its description it deals with some difficulties which are supposed to haunt the cleric mind as follows :-

"'Who knows the number of ivy-covered vicarages and rectories dotted about rural England, in which behind ther placid exteriors there may not be hidden away, as the spiritual skeletons in the cupboard, terrible doubts not only as to Jonah's whale, but Jesus's resurrection? Let the Church Gazette, which should be able to form some opinion upon this matter, answer."

"Being appealed to, we give our answer in all good faith, and expect it to be taken in like spirit. "Speaking, then, from large experience, we decidedly think that the class of ideas suggested do not occur to the minds of three out of four of our rustic priests. Some of them are so far given up to class and professional obse minds of three out of four of our rustic priests. Some of them are so far given up to class and professional obse-sions that they never have allowed their thoughts over verge on such dangerous themes. This is true; but ye' we are not proud of it. For these men ought to be leaders of thought, or else they have no locus stand and all, except on the foundation of clothing clubs and mothers' meetings; except, too, on the grounds of certain superhuman powers which some of them claim, but which here it is not worth while to discuss. "There remain the exceptions, dotted not thickly, but all too sparsely, over the wide rural districts of the land. These men are mostly, if not entirely, Broad Churchme If the Freethinker does not understand the technical term it may be explained to mean men who think freely.

it may be explained to mean men who think freely in doing so they have been obliged to recognise the difference under discussion; and not only to recognise them but under discussion; and not only to recognise them but under discussion; and not only to recognise them to think about them as deeply and as thoroughly as culture and ability sufficed for. But, in general, all the is no longer a 'skeleton in the cupboard' to these met-because they have laid the ghost by living down at crudity of their earlier thoughts, and have seen their as to something higher and more worth living for than the blank negations of mere materialism. blank negations of mere materialism.

"Our answer, then, to the Freethinker is, that the tone of thought it represents has to do with a mere half puth but one which, when amplified and ripened, carries in the promise of better things."

In the first place, one must thank the Church Gast for responding so readily and with so much politen to the invitation which was offered. For the better understanding of the first sentence of its reply, it may be explained that the remark substanting another be explained that the remark alluded to is in another note, wherein the editor at note, wherein the editor observes :-

"There are not many polytheists in these days if prevailing secular sentiment being decidedly in direction indicated by Clough's satirical couplet-

Thou shalt have one God only—who Would be at the expense of two?

As for Atheists, we are inclined to believe that the parties as extinct as the dodo."

The editor rather implies, in the first note above, the the Freethinker does not understand the technical ter-Broad Churchman. Might we not, with all due resput suggest that the Church Gazette has failed to under stand the term Atheist? Certainly there are man persons—more than may be supposed by the certain mind—who describe themselves as Atheists. For m self I take that designation, and do so in preference that of "Agnostic." I count it as of no consequent the Freethinker does not understand the technical I count it as of no consequence ejudices of the that of "Agnostic." I count it as of no consequent odium upon it, so that to the common ear it south hardly "respectable." Atheism has its inspiring and tions, and can point to a noble arrow of heroes and tions, and can point to a noble army of heroes and martyrs; and its attitude, as defined by leading exponents, being quite in accordance with my of views, I call myself an Atheist, and should think disloyalty to those who have labored and sufference the past to discard the name for some new designation though it denoted, as Agnosticism does, the same photon though it denoted, as Agnosticism does, the same photo of thought.

But, as a matter of fact, the Church Gazette is under in the second se a misapprehension as to what Atheism really is and is in the provide the second This was shown by an editorial article in

MR sim rep Ver truc wha he s age som sove Pow and T resu to e the - Wor

0 ti

n: N

m

es hi

uT th th th

Pr ex M

ho lec Th that su eve 1

the

sted

suc, s, of pro-nial

end

are

and heir the only the niou

:001

edly the set to be at and tain but bad nen life abier in en trat tone uth in R

ichi

aest the may

the いた

Filer

that

4 in a

jon

ader bas

77

issue of September 30, entitled "The Agnostic." To that article Mr. Watts penned a most admirable and effective effective reply, as the readers of this journal will doubtless remember. The Church Gazette assumes that the Atheist "denies" the existence of God. But he does oot, as Mr. Watts showed by the definitions of leading Atheists from whom he quoted. There is no need to repeat these definitions. The race of Atheists, so far from being extinct as the dodo, is very much alive and constantly. constantly increasing.

The answer to the interrogation, as to country parsons, being given in all good faith, is readly accepted in that spirit. As I accompanied the question with the expres-sion of belief that the Church Gasette "should be able to form some opinion on the matter," it would ill become me to quarrel with the information it is kind enough to afford. I formed an estimate amount on the number afford. attord. I formed no estimate myself as to the number of "skeletons in parsonic cupboards." Necessarily it is a matter upon which it would be hazardous for me or any other Freethinker to venture an opinion. A special intimacy with what is behind the "placid exteriors" of the parsonic homesteads would be indispensable to an approximate it is a why I appealed to the approximate idea. That is why I appealed to the Church Guzette. It is rather disappointing to learn on so good an authority that the number is comparatively small; and that the larger section of rural priests are so devoted to "class and professional obsessions" as not as not to concern their minds with themes which now, more than ever, are occupying the attention of the outer World

The other section, mostly composed of Broad Churchmen, are happy indeed if, as we are assured, they have laid the ghost by living down the crudity of their earlier thoughts." That is exactly what Freethinkers have done. For the most part, they have been brought up in a belief in the principles of the Christian religion. They have "lived down the crudity of their earlier thoughts." As far as they are concerned themselves, they have laid their theological ghosts for ever. Perhaps they are now only in possession of "a half-truth"; but that at any provide the part of the p that, at any rate, is better than an entire falsity. Their principles are not mere "blank negations," as the expository patients in this journal—especially those of expository articles in this journal—especially those of Watts—from week to week testify. Naturally, we hope to "amplify and ripen" into better things as know-that earnest and views of life and its duties expand. That earnest progressive spirit is the essence of Freehought, and the ever-present inspiration of us all. But the movement is not likely to be in the direction of supernaturalism, even of the Broad Church type, what-ver temptation of the Broad by the Church Gasette ver temptations may be offered by the Church Gasette in its amiable and cultured advocacy.

FRANCIS NEALE.

Thomas Paine.

MR. CHAIRMAN, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, -- It is not simply a dimensional to help rescue the ^{IR.} CHAIRMAN, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—It is not simply a duty, but it is a privilege, to help rescue the of ignorance and hypocrisy. We have listened to a Conway, and the reason it is so noble is that it is what he accomplished in this world, and a little of what what he accomplished in this world, and a little of what he suffered. We must remember that for many, many manual by two ideas—one, that ages mankind was governed by two ideas—one, that power to cover a from the clouds—came from Power to govern came from the clouds—came from eir through the set of kings and that all who ruled occupied their king of kings—and that all who ruled occupied sovereignty above all. This was the belief; and this power from above all. ^{bower} from on high, coming to the king, going on down from him to the lowest one in authority, finally reached, probled the lowest one is authority.

^{and} him to the lowest one in authority, ... Thus it was for many, many generations, and the result of it was for many, many toiled in vain, with little result of it was for many, many generations, to eat and list that the many toiled in vain, with little to eat and little to wear, living in huts and dens, that the few might live in idleness—might be clad in robes of purple. That was the scheme of the divine govern-ment, believed in by our ancestors--honestly believed in, at least, by those who submitted ; and they were to be rewarded for all the pains suffered in this world by having harps when they should go to another. And they consoled themselves with the thought : While the kings and the queens and the lords and the ladies have their good times here, we will have our good times after we die; and possibly we will have the happiness of see-ing all these ladies and gentlemen in hell. The latter reflection, undoubtedly, was a great consolation.

This address was delivered immediately after one delivered delivered in the city of the state of

That, I say, was the first idea ; but the man of whom you have heard so much, which has been so well said, took the other ground, and said : "This power to govern does not come from God. God must be retired from politics. This power to govern comes from the consent of the governed. The source of this authority must be the people themselves." Well, nothing could be more laughable at that time than the idea of having a government administered by shoemakers, and carpenters, and farmers, and simply buyers and sellers, and traders. It was thought impossible that such people should have brain enough to really administer a government.

This governing power-this governing sense-was confined to the few—the few that had been chosen by the king of kings; but finally, through the efforts of Thomas Paine, more than through the efforts of any other man who ever trod the Western world, that experiment was tried here on our soil ; and the question was whether ordinary human beings, with ordinary intelli-gence, even though they were mechanics and farmers and merchants-and lawyers-whether they had the sense and the honesty to form a government, and patriotism enough to administer it. It was tried here; and I need not say it has been an amazing success. In all these other governments the Church and State existed together. They were united. But a few people in the days of Thomas Paine said : "Let us separate Church and State"; and our forefathers agreed to it. Very few, however, were in favor of it.

I will tell you to-night why they agreed to it. A few, like Thomas Paine, like Benjamin Franklin, like Thomas Jefferson-few knew there should be no such marriage. But the question came up before the many-the average multitude—and then the question took a different form. It was not with them, Shall there be a Church and State? but, Shall it be our Church? The Puritans would have had their Church united to the State if they had had the power; the Episcopalians the same; and so in every sect in the thirteen colonies. But there is a little human nature even in a Church; and the Church that could not be a bride was willing the State should remain a bachelor rather than marry a rival. In that way, and in that way only, we got rid of the Church in this country.

Now, then, that was the first great step. Political power does not come from God; or, if there be an infinite being, he allows human beings to govern themselves. He refused longer to be accountable for the blunders of any administration, and that was an excellent thing for him. So, since that time, in this country, and in some other lands, the people have endeavored to manage their own affairs, without the interference of any gentleman pretending to be the agent of some power above the clouds. That was the first step.

Then there is another thing. For many, many genera-tions, it has been believed—is believed by a great many good people to-night-that religion comes from the We have now got to the point that we know clouds. that political power comes from the people, and that every government should rest on the consent of the governed. We know that. We have found out that the people themselves make and create and administer better government than they ever got from the clouds. better government than they ever got nom the clouds. I say, then, the belief was that religion came from that same country; and that if some being, somewhere in the midst of the constellations, had not written the Ten Commandments, we would never have known right from wrong.

Now, it has always seemed to me—and I think I can make it clear to you—that no such information was make it clear to you wind no such information was necessary. In this world, for a great many years, people have had to work to get an honest living; and, wherever man has worked to get an honest living, he has always objected to some fellow who did not work

1

OF

٥r

WO

the

Vaş

338 exi

mis

not dor

and he

he

he

cau

We

the

mis

did

bey

sai

kng

nat

abo Thi

0:11

rea

and

to-chi Chi W:

infl Ma Ag nat

fron

mit

N

me: Ho

vat

was

pos the hen do hen do hen thas to patilis patilis pas cusc disc hor sion

1)(

(1) 7

5)1

4) 1

(5) (

Confucius.

(551-479 B.C.)

KUNG-FU-TZU, or 117 (Kung-tzu), popularly known as Confucius, was neither a philosopher nor a founder of religion; he was a moral teacher, or more properly a statesman, whose maxim was that the people should be governed by the ethical law of sympathy,* rather than by the jurisprudential principle of right and duty. There fore, those ontological and epistemological problems which led Greek and Indian minds into a maze of metaphysical speculation did not claim much attention from the Chinese sage, nor did the deep and pessimistic religious feelings which occupied the heart of the Semitic prophet stir in him any acciention for Control of the Semitic prophet stir in him any aspiration for God or the kingdom of heaven.

Meng-tzu, or Mencius, † one of the most prominent leaders of Confucianism, spoke of him as one who collected ancient traditions and brought them to per-Confucius himself once said that he profection. pounded the old doctrine of ancient sages, and did not proclaim anything new and original. This spirit of proclaim anything new and original.[‡] This spirit of conservatism and common sense being the spirit of Correction of the spirit fucianism as well as the national character of the Chinese Confucius, who was living at the time when the Chou dynasty was separating into smaller dukedoms or king doms known as the Ch'un ch'iu and Chan kwoš period naturally desired to rescue the dynasty from disintegration, and to actualise again, if possible, the administration of Yao and Shun, the two most reverend sage-kings of China.

Confucius, accompanied by his disciples, wandered from one place to another till he was sixty-five ye old, trying to persuade the feudal lords to adopt his method of administration, and to make a practical appli-cation of his ethical teachings. He did not think of propagating his doctring of compared propagating his doctrine of sympathy directly among the masses, and expected to refer the directly among the masses, and expected to reform the people through the government solely but h the government solely; but he encountered many disasters and much suffering, and was at last obliged to retire from the world, and to find comfort in the contemplation of his doctrine, which now became the principal subject of his dialogues with his disciples. The Lun In, one of the canonical books of Confirming the record of the canonical books of Confucianism, is the recordof the "sayings and conversations" of this latter phase of his life, and must be deemed of this latter phase of his life, and must be deemed of paramount implance tance for the students of Confucianism as being the one authentic statement of Confucian ethics.

In Confucius and in his doctrine are solidly crystallised we understand Confucius we understand the Chinese the essence and the ideal of the Chinese people. The greatest man who has acquired unshakeable national renown and reverence in a law renown and reverence in a long course of time can be looked at as the perfect mirror of the can be looked at as the perfect mirror of the nation, in which their prominent characteristics are revealed in their brightest and clearest colore

What reflections of the Chinese mind, then, can we see through Confucius? They are a lack of imagination and a tendency to positive are a lack of imagination. tion and a tendency to positive conservatism, utilitarian ism, practicality, and optimized structure are ism, practicality, and optimism. These elements are deeply rooted in every tissue of the filter of t deeply rooted in every tissue of the Chinese mental con-stitution.

The most metaphysical book of Confucianism is ancient Fih King, or Book of Changes, on which for a fucius is said to have written fucius is said to have written a commentary known the Hsi 12'ũ ch'nan, and this c the Hsi Is'ŭ ch'uan, and this fact is confirmed by and tradition which says that by his tradition which says that by his constant study and handling of the book its leather binding-string thrice worn out. Though this proves to a cert degree that he had a speculative mind, we observe even there the predominance of ethical elements which put aside all abstruse philosophics put aside all abstruse philosophical arguments and soal ing poetical imaginations. How sober, positivistic, and and in a sense agnostic he is, when compared with his eller contemporary Lao trib when contemporary Lao tzŭ, whose mind, transcending in phenomenal world, wanders in the eternity of the in (Tao)! It is true. Confusion Tao)! It is true, Confucius occasionally makes mention taking the result of his labors. If a man that planted a few acres of potatoes, and hoed them all summer, and dug them in the fall, and picked them up-using his own back-it would never have occurred to him that a gentleman who had sat on the fence and watched himsay, it would never have occurred to him that the fence-sitter, even if no Ten Commandments had ever been given, had a better right to the potatoes than the man who raised them. So it seems to me that in every country where the people, or a majority of the people, objected to being murdered, there would probably have been a law against murder, whether they had ever heard from Mount Sinai or not. And so we might go through most of the Decalogue.

* In Chinese (jën). † He lived about a hundred years after Confucius, and was contemporary of Chwang-tzü, the best known follower of Lawin though they did not know each other. ‡ A liberal translation of "shu &rk pu tso, hsin erk hao kn" § Ch'un ch'in means "Spring and Fall," and chan kno country."

I say, then, we had to take another step, and that was that religion does not come from the clouds. Religion comes from the heart of man. Human affection is the foundation of all that is holy in religion. Human intelligence, applied to human conduct, is what we call morality; and you add to simple morality kindness, charity, love-and there can be no more perfect religion imagined by the brain of man. Now, then, as we succeeded so well in politics, by getting out of our mind the idea that power and authority came from beyond the stars, so I hope that we shall make the greatest possible advance in religion when we get it out of our minds that religion comes from another world.

There is no religion except humanity. There cannot Those clouds called creeds are destined all to fade be. away, but the sky will remain-humanity; and in the sky will shine the constellations of human virtues. In other words, we want to outgrow the supernatural in these affairs.

Thomas Paine helped take the first step. He dug down under the throne, searching for bedrock, and he found nothing but lies, mistakes, assumptions-everything that is infamous. And, when he got through with that work, it occurred to him one day to dig under the altar and see what was there; and it was worse there than under the throne. Thomas Paine was not what would be called to-day much of an infidel. I think he would have cut me dead. If he were alive to-night, he would be off with the Unitarians—and with the con-servative wing of the Unitarians. That is to say, he believed absolutely in the existence of an infinite God; and in some way he excused that God for making this world—for giving power to the Catholic Church. How he did it, I don't know; but he did it. In some way he excused that Deity for all the volcanoes and plagues and famines of the world. How, I don't know; but he did. And he may have been right. I am not saying that he was wrong. All I am saying is that I do not believe he was right. As I have said a hundred times, you have no idea how little I know on this subject; and you never will know how little I know until you appreciate the state of your own knowledge. Paine, I say, not only believed it, but he believed in a special providence, exactly as Mr. Conway has told you.

Well, so did Voltaire ; he wrote essay after essay, not simply to prove the existence of God, but that he in some way ruled this world. Well, I don't deny it; but there are two facts inconsistent in my mind—that is to say, one fact is inconsistent with the alleged fact. I cannot harmonic God and Sibaria Still I don't say that I harmonise God and Siberia. Still, I don't say that I know; because you know that I don't, and I know that I don't. But Paine wanted to do one thing. He wanted, in religion, to get rid of middlemen. He wanted the citizens of the United States to transact what little business they might have with the Deity without paying any commissions to gentlemen who were in the guessing business for a living. And whoever steps between a priest and his salary will find that he has committed all the crimes in the statutes ; and, if he does not find it out, others will find it out-when he is dead.

That is all he tried to do. He taught pure morality. He taught that we should worship God simply by expressing and feeling our gratitude, and that gratitude should rise from the heart for favors received, like perfume from a flower; that there need be no form, no ceremony, no costly cathedrals for this business, no hired clergy; that man could worship God for himself. Then he made enemies. Then they began to look, as Mr. Conway has said, for special providence.

(To be continued.)

of m (Ti), the Lord, or Shang Ti, the Lord on High, or Tien, Heaven, which some Christian Orientalists would like to render God or Heaven; but he, even if there might have been in his practical mind some vague conception of the All-Containing-One, did not assume any such attitude towards it as Christians do.

When he was wandering about almost in a state of exile, unable to find any royal listener, he ascribed his misfortune to the iron hand of fate (ming), but he did not personify it, nor did he exclaim, "Thy will be llis Tien or Tien ming is not animated; it is merely another name for nature or natural order. Of course, he tried every means in his own power to realise what he thought good; but when he had done all in his power he calmly resigned himself, and suffered the law of causality to take its own course. When his disciples were the causality to take its own course. were exasperated with their misfortunes, he consoled them by simply saying : "A superior man calmly endures misfortune."*

Confucius was, therefore, an advocate of realism; he did not dare to propound definite speculations about the and not dare to propound definite speculations about the beyond. When he was asked his opinion of death, he said: "How can one know death when one does not know life?" and when questioned regarding super-naturalism, he replied: "A superior man does not talk about mysterious powers and supernatural spirits." This keeping within the limits of experience is through-out characteristic of Confucianism, and it is the very ⁰at characteristic of Confucianism, and it is the very reason why his doctrine has acquired such a controlling and enduring influence over Chinese minds as we observe to-day. Even such philosophers as Chou-tzŭ (1022-1073), Chu-tzü (1122-10/3), Chu-tzü (1130-1200), Liu-hsiang-san (1139-1192), and Wang-yang-ming (1472-1529), all of whom were greatly influenced by the highly-speculative philosophy of the Mahayana Buddhism could not forsake their native Mahayana Buddhism, could not forsake their native Agnostic teacher, nor shake off the fetter of their national peculiarity. While they borrowed many things from Buddt from Buddhism, they still continued faithfully to transmit and to interpret the doctrine of Kung-fu-tzu.

Morality goes side by side with peace, and peace means order, a necessary product of conservatism. How, then, can Confucianism be other than conser-vatism? Besides, Confucius was born, as said before, a time of disorder and transformation, and all he in a time of disorder and transformation, and all he wanted wanted was a reform of the evils of his age. He proposed to restore the moral relations of human society as they were in the bygone golden age. And to effect this he found the bygone golden age. Sympathy (jen) and he found the guiding principle in sympathy (jen) and benevolence (shu). The basis of his doctrine, "Do not do to other sympathy to other basis done to you by The basis of his doctrine, into the dot to others what you would not have done to you by others," has a striking similarity to the golden rule, the saying of Christ. Lao-tzu also speaks about compassion $(I_{S'ii})$ as one of the three treasures, but he entirely discrements the form by which this inner prinentirely disregards the form by which this inner prin-ciple might become manifest to others. His whole emphasis fell upon our subjective attitude, while Con-facius, being more for Chinage than Lao-tzu, considered fucius, being more of a Chinese than Lao-tzu, considered it necessary to have a proper way of manifesting what is going on in one's mind. To this end he repeatedly customs and of the observation of the ancient habits and repealed to the observation of the ancient nature $I_{\rm ustoms}$, and of the traditional rules of propriety. His disciples, therefore, minutely describe in the Lun $I_{\rm uot}$ sions, the teacher appeared and behaved on certain occa-TEITARO SUZUKI.

From " The Open Court."

r

÷ċ, r 36 p*

Ó 10 10

35 NO

r) pl

105

Ű 00 (To be concluded.)

How to Help US. And try to sell them, guaranteeing to take the copies that remain unsold. remain unsold. Take an extra copy (or more), and circulate it among your acquaintances.

acquaintances. Leave a copy of the Freethinker now and then in the train, the car, or the omnibus.

 ^{car,} or the omnibus.
 ^b Display, or get displayed, one of our contents-sheets, which are of a convenient size for the purpose. Mr. Forder will send them on application.
 ^b Get voice ^{send} them on application. Get your newsagent to exhibit the Freethinker in the window.

Chin Isn ku ch'iung

The Boy's Story of Benjamin.

[Excerpt from the exercise book of Joseph Watkins, aged twelve, pupil of the Band of Hope Sunday-school, Worthing. The date of the essay shows it to have been written for the Sunday-class, October 1, 1899.]

BENJAMIN was a 'cute little chap. He cooked savory meat, BENJAMIN was a 'cute little chap. He cooked savory meat, such as his father loved, and got round him in many other ways. One day Benjamin said to his father : "Oh ! Pa, I've had such a funny dream. I dreamt there was a ladder which went up to the moon, and creatures with gold and silver wings were hurrying up and down it like winking," added little Benjamin, with a sly air, for he couldn't think of a good comparison being anything but poetical. "That, my little man," said the father kindly, "was a vision of the Stock Exchange. Go," he added, "and tell Zaber that my public agents are to sell out Sinais and buy in the New Hittite loan, while my secret agents do just the reverse. In that way we shall rig the market and make a pot of money." Benjamin flew like the wind, but took the plate closet on his Benjamin flew like the wind, but took the plate closet on his way, and embezzled the famous family drinking cup of solid gold, that had been in Noah's Ark, and in the family time out of mind, for Methusaleh had left it in his will to the first out of mind, for Methusaleh had left it in his will to the first member of the family, who was a particular friend of his; he had left it by a special codicil, the nine hundredth one, for you know he was 900 years old when he died, and he made a new codicil to his will every year. This will was one of the wonders of the world, for it was so long that it reached all the way from Jerusalem to Alabama, or even to San Francisco, if you paid the extra railway fare; and all the forests in l'alestine had been barked for the lawyers to have bark enough to write it out upon, and that is why, even to this day, there are no trees to speak of in the Holy Land. Well, old Ikey rushed to the plate closet as soon as he heard the street door slam to, and was beside himself with iov this day, there are no trees to speak of in the Holy Land. Well, old Ikey rushed to the plate closet as soon as he heard the street door slam to, and was beside himself with joy when he found that the famous cup was gone. "He's fly, a chip of the old block, just what I should have done myself under similar circumstances," exclaimed the old fellow, chuckling and rubbing his hands with glee. "Of course I shall come round him in the end," he added, with a more than archangelic leer, "but that will only make him flyer still in future." So saying, he rummaged in his strong box until he had found a packet of debtors' bonds, and hurried off with them to Fairrow, the pawnbroker, for he knew that the famous cup would now be in his hands. At first Fairrow denied any knowledge of it, but old Ikey made him open a sack of mouldy oats, destined for the new corps of Egyptian volunteers, for Fairrow was also an army store contractor, and there at the bottom of the sack lay the wonderful cup, shining and blinking like the sun setting through a purple haze. Then old Ikey drew out his bonds and threatened to distrain if the cup was not at once returned to him. But Fairrow was not to be bit. He went up to old Ikey and whispered something in his ear, but only the words "Pot-affair," "Divorce," and "Public Scandal" were audible. Old Ikey turned very pale at first, but then he pulled himself together, took Fairrow frankly by the hand and said : "Well, old fellow, don't let us turn enemies in our old age; I tell you what. I'll give you the straight tip this time, you'll make a together, took Fairrow frankly by the hand and said : "Well, old fellow, don't let us turn enemies in our old age; I tell you what, I'll give you the straight tip this time, you'll make a pot of money by it, and in return you'll give me back our family pots. Fairrow declared himself agreeable, and old Ikey said : "My dear, very dear friend, buy in Sinais and sell out New Hittles—and you just see!" Fairrow pressed the old man's hand affectionately—tears of gratitude were actually trickling from his long hooky nose. And so the old man took leave of him. "We shall meet again," he said, with a gentle sob, and went. Then he instructed his public agents on the Stock Exchange that, as soon as they saw Fairrow's agent come to buy, they were to buy in Sinais and sell out Hittites as long as he was there, so as to make quite sure that Fairrow should do just the opposite of what old Ikey had advised him to do. In this way Fairrow, the pawnbroker, was quite "bust up," and declared bankrupt; and old Ikey, for a trifling sum of money, bought in the family drinking cup, when Fairrow's effects were put up to auction. In those days this method of doing business was called spoiling the Egyptians, and going through the Bankruptcy Court was alluded to euphemistically as the Passage of the Red Sea. I need hardly add that after this little Benjamin was unani-mously elected a member of the Stock Exchange, and when Fairrow hanged himself for vexation married Potaffair, and they lived together happily everafter. old fellow, don't let us turn enemies in our old age ; I tell you they lived together happily everafter.

"There's one thing that has always puzzled me," said the deacon. "Only one?" the parson asked. "Well, not in particular. You say there is no marrying nor giving in marriage in heaven." "Yes, that's what the Bible tells us." "Well, in that case, what do the preachers do who have small salaries up there?" After the deacon had finished laughing at his joke, the parson said : "Oh, I don't know. The two dollars I got for marrying your son to Brother Pritchard's daughter didn't make me independent for life." The deacon now threatens to go over to another church,-Chicago Times Herald.

S

C

ill pa th

SUNDAY LECTURE NOTICES, ETC.

[Notices of Lectures, etc., must reach us by first post on Tuesday, and be marked "Lecture Notice," if not sent on post-card.]

LONDON.

THE ATHENÆUM HALL (73 Tottenham Court-road, W.): 7.30, C. Cohen. BRADLAUGH CLUB AND INSTITUTE (36 Newington Green-road, Ball's Pond): 8.30, The Bohemian Comedy Company in "The Scowball."

CAMBERWELL (North Camberwell Hall, 61 New Church-road) :

CAMBERWELL (North Camberwell Hall, 61 New Church-road): 7.30, G. W. Foote, "Britishers and Boers: A Freethinker's View of the White War in South Africa." SOUTH LONDON ETHICAL SOCIETY (Masonic Hall, Camberwell New-road): 11.15, Discussion on "Early Marriage," opened by Dr. Drysdale; 7, F. J. Gould, "The Sacred." WEST LONDON ETHICAL SOCIETY (Empress Rooms, Royal Palace Hotel, High-street, Kensington, W.): 11, Dr. Stanton Coit, "The Religion of Democracy." WESTMINSTER SECULAR SOCIETY (Grosvenor Arms, Page-street): 7.30, H. Courtney, "History of Freethought."

COUNTRY.

BIRMINGHAM BRANCH (Prince of Wales Assembly Rooms): H. Percy Ward—11, "Why the Church of England Should be Disestablished "; 7, "How Christianity has Degraded Woman." CHATHAM SECULAR SOCIETY (Queen's-road, New Brompton): 2.45, Sunday School; 7, Monthly Entertainment. DERBY (Central Hotel, Market-place): 7, Social evening and rouning.

reunion. EDINBURGH (Moulders' Hall, 105 High-street): 6.30, Mr. Mac-

The Fall of Man. waters,

waters, "The Fall of Man."
GLASGOW (110 Brunswick-street): 12, Discussion Class-Mr.
Chalmers; 6.30, A. G. Nostik.
HULL (Friendly Societies Hall, No. 2 Room): 7, F. W. Booth,
"Harry Lowerison's Sprays of Sweet Briar." (An appreciation.)
LEICESTER SECULAR SOCIETY (Humberstone-gate): 6.30, J.
McCabe, "The Church in France."
LIVERPOOL (Alexandra Hall, Islington-square): 7, A lecture.
MANCHESTER SECULAR HALL (Rusholme-road, All Saints):
7, W. Stanley, "A Day Trip to London." (Lantern views.)
PORTH BRANCH (100 Primrose-street, Tonypandy): 6, A Meeting.
SHEFFIELD SECULAR SOCIETY (Hall of Science, Rockingham-street): Robert Law, F.G.S.-3, "Fossils, and What they Tell Us of the Earth's History"; 7, "My Journey to Switzerland and the Geology of the Alps." Tea at 5.

Lecturers' Engagements.

C. COHEN, 17 Osborne-road, High-road, Leyton.—November 26, Athenæum, Tottenham Court-road. December 3, Sheffield; 10, Hull; 17, Leicester; 31, Birmingham.

H. PERCY WARD, 2 Learnington-place, George-street, Balsall Heath, Birmingham. –November 26, Birmingham. December 17, Birmingham.

POSITIVISM.

"Reorganisation, without god on king, by the systematic worship of Humanity."

Information and publications on the Religion of Humanity may be obtained free on application to the Church of Humanity, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

THE BEST BOOK ON NEO-MALTHUSIANISM IS, I BELIEVE,

TRUE MORALITY, or THE THEORY AND PRACTICE OF NEO-MALTHUSIANISM.

By J. R. HOLMES, M.M.L., M.V.S., M.N.S.S.

160 pages, with portrait and autograph, bound in cloth, gill lettered. Price 1s., post free.

In order to bring the information within the reach of the poor, the most important parts of the book are issued in a pamphlet of 112 pages at ONE PENNY, post free 2d. Copies of the pamphlet for pages at ONE PENNY, post free 2d. Copies of the pamphlet for distribution 1s. a dozen post free. The National Reformer of September 4, 1892, says: "Mr. Holmes' pamphlet.....is an almost unexceptional statement of the Neo-Malthusian theory and practice.....and throughout appeals to moral feeling.....The special value of Mr. Holmes' service to the Neo-Malthusian cause and to human well-being generally is just his combination in his pamphlet of a plain statement of the physical and moral need for family limitation with a plain account of the means by which it can be secured, and an offer to all con-cerned of the requisites at the lowest possible prices." The Council of the Malthusian League, Dr. Drysdale, Dr. Allbutt, and others, have also spoken of it in very high terms. The trade supplied by R. FORDER, 28 Stonecutter-street, London, E.C. Other orders should be sent to the author,

J. R. HOLMES, HANNEY, WANTAGE, BERKS.

NEW & IMPORTANT WORK BY DR. W. W. HARDWICKE

Now ready, cloth, 304 pp., with numerous Illustrations. Price 5s., post free.

MAN: THE EVOLUTION OF HIS RELIGIOUS SYSTEMS AND SOCIAL CUSTOMS.

An Encyclopædia of Information Concerning Evolution-The Uni verse and Some of its More Common Phenomena-The Supernatural Ghosts, Spirits, Gods, Worship, Sorcery, Witchcraft, Heresy-Daner and Prayer--Biblical Promises-Fetichism--Totemism-Phallic Wo ship-Sacred Prostitution-Theories of Soul and Future Life-The Gods of the Ancients-The Legend of Creation-Inspired Revelation The Christian Scheme of Salvation-The Bible-An Analysis of Old and New Testaments-Inspired Contradictions-The First Chr tians — Evolution of Christianism — The Teachings of Jesus Original—Fabricated "Prophecies"—Miracles—Ancient Pagan Spir bols—Fruits of Christianism—Personation of D bols—Fruits of Christianism—Persecution of Freethinkers – An Elic Code-Blasphemy and Heresy-Relation of the Sexes, etc., etc.

London : Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

In the Light of the Higher Criticism.

With Special Reference to DEAN FARRAR'S New Apology

G. w. FOOTE. By

Published for the Freethought Publishing Company, Limited by R. Forder, 28 Stonecutter-street, London, E.C.

W. J. Rendell's "Wife's Friend

Recommended by Mrs. Besant in Law of Population, p. 37, 15 Dr. Allbutt in Wife's Handbook, p. 51. Made ONLY and Chadwell-street, Clerkenwell; 28. per doz., post free (reducion in larger quantities). For particulars send stamped envelope.

Important Gaution.

BEWARE of useless imitations substituted by some dealers and chemists, the words "Rendell & Co," and "J. W. Rendell, being speciously and plausibly introduced to deceive the public endell No. 182,688.

LOOK FOR AUTOGRAPH REGISTERED TRADE MARK.

In Red INK ON EACH BOX, WITHOUT WHICH NONE ARE GENUN

Higginson's Syringe, with Vertical and Reverse Current, 36 (4) 48. 6d., and 5s. 3d. Dr. Palfrey's Powder, 1s. 2d. Quinine Con-pound, 1s. 2d. Dr. Allbutt's Quinine Powders, 38. per doz.

Thwaites' Liver Pills.

The Best Family Medicine in the World. Will cure Liven Kidney, and all Stomach Diseases effectually.

Good for Heart Troubles and Cardiac Complaints, Female Iments, Anæmia, etc. 18 a Marcia Complaints, Pros Ailments, Anæmia, etc. 15. 1½d. and 25. 9d. per box.

free, 14 or 33 stamps. Directions with each box. G. THWAITES, Herbalist, Stockton-on-Tees.

J. Greeva NON-POISONOUS PAINTS.

Resist all Atmospheric Influences. Samples Free. Fisher, 78 Chapel Allerton, Leeds.

STANTON, the People's Dentist, 335 Strand (opposite Somersel House).—TEETH on VULCANITE, 28. 6d. each; upper Completed in four hours when required; repairing or alternation in two hours. If you pay more than the above, they are charges. Teeth on platinum, 78. 6d. each; on 18 ct. gold, is stopping, 28. 6d.; extraction, 18.; painless by gas, 5%.

NOVEMBER 26, 1899.

99. -CKE.

N:

MS.

Uni

nal-ncing

Wor-The on-hris. Not 5ym

hicil

C.

1. gy.

, by

1"

and 15 tion

10

Sdo DAL

ch

11º abil

and .

get of 5000

THE FREETHINKER.

READY IN A FEW DAYS.

THE

SECULAR ALMANACK FOR 1900

ISSUED BY THE NATIONAL SECULAR SOCIETY, AND EDITED BY

W. FOOTE, G.

Containing a Freethought Calendar, full particulars of the National Secular Society and its Branches, as well as of other Freethought Organizations, and a number of Special Articles by G. W. Foote, Charles Watts, C. Cohen, Francis Neale, Minnermus, and others.

PRICE THREEPENCE.

LONDON: R. FORDER, 28 STONECUTTER-STREET, E.C.

Now Ready.

REPLY GLADSTONE. TO COLONEL INGERSOLL. By

New Edition. Handsomely Printed

This is one of Ingersoll's masterpieces. The encounter with Gladstone drew forth all his powers. In logic, wit, illustration, and controversial dexterity, this pamphlet is almost, if not quite, unrivalled. It also contains some passages of superb poetry. Freethinkers should read it frequently. It will furnish them with hints and points in their friendly discussions with Christians. They should likewise lend it to their orthodox friends whenever they have an arcenterity. they have an opportunity.

PRICE FOURPENCE.

LONDON : THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY, LIMITED. AGENT : R. FORDER, 28 STONECUTTER-STREET, E.C.

FAT GEESE AND FINE TURKEYS.

ANOTHER BOLD BID FOR A BIG TRADE.

Following our Immense Success of last year, we again offer the choice of a Fat Goose or a Fine Turkey to the sender of every 10th order received for any of the following 3 Parcels ^{up} to December 23, 1899.

Lot 11.	Ladies' Costumes.	Gents' Overcoat.
Pair Pure Wool Blankets	In the latest Style. Made from
ilb. Fra	a fine Plain Costume Cloth in	Black, Navy, Brown, or Grey.
	any Color.	Made to Measure.
	215. Carriage Paid. Samples and Measurement Form Free.	21s. Carriage Paid.
		Measurement Form Free.

Unly Orders Accompanied by CASH are Eligible for Prizes. All Prizes sent away on December 23, and full list of winners printed in the "Freethinker,"

J. W. GOTT, 2 & 4 Union Street, Bradford.

LTD. FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY, THE

Registered under the Companies' Acts 1862 to 1890.

Deferred Shares, £1,000 Capital £5,000 in Shares of £1 each. Ordinary Shares, £4,000.

The Ordinary Shares are Offered for Subscription, and are Payable as follows :--

25. 6d. per Share on Application.

5s. od. " ,,

28. 6d. ,, ,,

,, Allotment. ,, December 31, 1899. in Subsequent Calls, at one month's notice, as may be required. IOS. od. .,

DIDECTODE

GEORGE ANDERSON, 35a Great George-street, West-	CHARLES WATTS, 24 Carminia-road, Balham, S.W.
minster, S.W.	ROBERT FORDER, 28 Stonecutter-street, E.C.
SAMUEL HARTMANN, 21 Australian Avenue, E.C.	G. W. FOOTE, 28 Stonecutter-street, E.C.

Temporary Office-377 Strand, London, W.C.

Secretary-E. M. VANCE (Miss).

PROSPECTUS.

THE Freethought Publishing Company, Limited, has been formed to acquire and take over the copyright of the weekly newspaper called the Freethinker, together with the stock of books and pamphlets connected therewith and the goodwill of the business; and to continue publishing the said newspaper, and selling the said books are pamphlets, and issuing fresh publications of a similar character t and close to a selling the said books and selling the said books and pamphlets. and the goodwill of the business; and to continue publishing the said newspaper, and selling the said books and pamphlets, and issuing fresh publications of a similar character; and also to engage in any other business which may be convenient and beneficial to the Company. The nominal Capital of the Company is £5,000, in Shares of £1 each. Of these 4,000 are Ordinary Shares and 1,000 Deferred Shares. The whole of the Deferred Shares, bearing no dividend until Ordinary Shares receive £5 per cent. per annum, are subscribed by the Vendor. The Ordinary Shares are offered for general subscription. Mr. G. W. Foote, the Vendor, agrees to take £2,000 for his interest in the Erecthinker and for the stock of the stock

£5 per cent. per annum, are subscribed by the Vendor. The Ordinary Shares are offered for general subscription Mr. G. W. Foote, the Vendor, agrees to take £2,000 for his interest in the Freethinker and for the stock of books and pamphlets as it stands. Of this sum £1,000 is to be retained by the Board and applied to the par-ment in full of the 1,000 Deferred Shares subscribed by the Vendor. The remainder of the purchase money payable as follows:—£250 on taking possession, and the balance in five instalments at intervals of three month Mr. Foote also binds himself by agreement to act as Editor of the Freethinker, and as Managing Director Board. Provision is made by an arbitration clause for any difference that may arise as to function or salary in ment is for ten years.

ment is for ten years. The Directors consider that the Vendor, by binding himself to stand by the Company for a lengthy period and by investing one-half of the purchase money in Deferred Shares, whose value will chiefly depend upon himself gives ample proof of his bonâ fides in promoting the Company, and of his confidence in its success. The Directors have no doubt that the Company will be able to pay a reasonable dividend to Shareholderi besides placing the literary propaganda of Freethought upon a sound business footing. They are confident the the circulation of the Freethinker alone, which already secures the Company against any loss, may be considered ably increased by capital, advertising, and other commercial advantages; and the profit of such increase weith be relatively very large, considering the published price of the journal. They are also satisfied that, with adequate Capital which is now sought, a good profit may be derived from the publication of books and pampheou A public for such works is already assured, and may be extended; and access to this public is guaranteed without cost through the Freethinker.

In offering these 4,000 Ordinary Shares—less those subscribed by the Signatories of the Memorandum and Articles—to the members of the Freethought party, the Directors have no doubt as to the result, especially view of the numerous preliminary promises of support which have been received and publicly acknowledged. P.S.—According to the Articles of Association

P.S.—According to the Articles of Association—copies of which can be obtained at the Office at the $p_{h}^{p_{h}}$ Shilling—the Directors have power to receive payment in full at any time for a first the Office at the $p_{h}^{p_{h}}$ One Shilling—the Directors have power to receive payment in full at any time from Shareholders. Those who price at the price of the full amount of their Shares will, of course, cover their whole liability at once, and will materially assist the Company at the outset.

APPLICATION FORM FOR ORDINARY SHARES.

Name (in full) Address Date..... Description All Cheques, etc., to be made payable to the Company, and crossed.

Published for the FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY, Limited, by R. FORDER, 28 Stonecutter-street, London, E.C.

MR. and thro enti stan spec style in Social So in M

V

M day of the solution of the s pandid the state
