THE Freethinker

Edited by G. W. FOOTE.

VOL. XXXV.-No. 27

SUNDAY, JULY 4, 1915

PRICE TWOPENCE

In cannot now be put off with promissory notes upon ten they now claim as their inalienable birthright enjoyment of this earth.-HEINE.

pics

1515 /

<sup>Uerical</sup> Veracity and the Miracle at Mons.

story of the "Angelic Guard at Mons"-dealt in my last week's article, possesses numerous tores that are of both psychological and historical be as well to summarise the story and its

The story originally appeared from the pen of Mr. Machen, and was written as early as last Machen, and was written as early as interested heard nothing from anyone about this host agels, he had nothing from anyone about this control of angels, he had not, he says, "the faintest echo" of <sup>146618</sup>, he had not, he says, "the faintest come a major of any such appearance. All he had to build <sup>14 WAS a low such appearance.</sup> the any such appearance. All he had to your of a story over but over of Troy the gods of over again. In the Wars of Troy the gods the thing are the seen fighting. In the legends of Old Rome the being appears. Above all, there is the common blief of savages that the tribal ghosts may interfere of savages that the tribal ghosts may income of the tribes. hat is undoubtedly at the root of the whole

The these legends in his mind, Mr. Machen The shad is should be taken as a statement of the should be offered no evidence for its that it should be taken as a statement of and, of course, he offered no evidence for its the months was in September, 1914, and there for the months the rested. The next appearthe months the matter rested. The next appear-Bristol may was in a parish magazine issued without, of course, Bristol. There it appeared—without, of course, Mention of the statement thetion of Mr. Machen-as a sober statement act. The Vicar of All Saints actually gave an guotation of All Saints actually gave and The Vicar of All Saints actually gave asys he saw the from an officer's letter, who says the saw the angels, and also one from another the saw the angels, and also one from another the charge of the same the saw the angels, and also one from the soldiers was bidence of the horses with the soldiers was also in, inasmuch as they behaved in such a way one must assume that to cite Dr. Horton-<sup>avidently the animals beheld what our men beheld."</sup> the video of the story is told by "so many witnesses" that the story is told by "so many witnesses" that the story is told by "so many witnesses" that the story is told by "so many witnesses " that the story " the story so witness the story " the story " the story so witness the story " the story so witness the story the and again." The British soldiers — again." The British sources a vision of angels was seen : the horses of the German a vision of angels was seen ; the horses of the Germans standard and the pursues and the retreating British but is the German pursues and the retreating British the German pursues and the retreating British but is the angels was seen ; the horses of the Germans of men who, some of the pursuit was paralysed. This, in discound to accept supernatural interpretations of earthly by solemn and secred the story told in awed tones retinence." I have heard the story told in awed tones telemen and secred ' said one of them to explain his

The writer adds that "the considered statement" of such a man as Dr. Horton "is not to be lightly set aside."

Now, bear in mind that Dr. Horton spoke of his "so many witnesses," the Vicar of All Saints wrote his story with the "faked" evidence of anonymous officers, and the Guardian writer gave his tale of hearing it from a number of men in "awed tones," before Mr. Machen wrote and claimed to have origi-nated the story. His version had appeared eight months before as a casual newspaper article, and it was not expected that it would be recalled. Mr. Machen's claim disposed of the whole story. And let this be borne in mind, none of these people who professed first-hand evidence of the truth of the angelic vision have challenged Mr. Machen's claim to have created the legion of angels "out of his own head." The Vicar of All Saints has not produced the letters, the Guardian writer has not brought forward his informants, Dr. Horton has remained equally reticent. To put the matter in a nutshell, Mr. Machen told them all that when they claimed to have evidence for the truth of the story they were romancingsome would say lying. The story belonged to him, and no evidence existed. And since the exposure none of the parties implicated have pretended that any proof does exist.

The Evening News of June 21 says that Mr. Machen "proved to have written better than he knew, for various witnesses-officers and men who took part in the retreat-came forward to testify to seeing the vision which Mr. Machen had imagined." Not No one has come forward. All that happened 80. was that Dr. Horton, and the vicar, and the Guardian writer said they had heard it from officers and men, and all this before Mr. Machen made public the fact that he invented it. They have not said so since. Not one of them has offered any public apology for having treated the public to all this manufactured evidence. And, curiously enough, no one seems to think that they ought to have done so. If the same kind of exposure had taken place in politics there would have been a demand for an apology. In the case of the clergy no surprise is expressed. It is a fine commentary upon the ethical spirit induced by Christian practice.

When a report of Dr. Horton's sermon appeared, Mr. Machen called upon Dr. Horton, and told him that he (Mr. Machen) had invented the whole thing. Dr. Horton did not contest the statement. He said nothing about his own possession of evidence. What he did say was this :--

"I was the more particularly disposed to believe in the story of the angelic apparition during the retreat from Mons, from what I myself heard from an Army reader. He told me that all those who were in that retreat were changed men. They had all prayed, and they had all felt a sense as of spiritual uplifting; and so the tale seemed to me congruous with their experience.'

Observe that "the story repeated by so many wit-nesses," that their number commands credence, is reduced to an unnamed "Army reader"-someone who is in the same line of business as Dr. Horton; that is, if he exists at all. And he said nothing what-ever about an angelic apparition. All he is alleged to have said is that "all the men ..... were changed men "--which is not true, but which might mean anything or nothing. Their feelings were quite

"congrous with their experiences." With what experiences? The only experience in question is the angelic vision. All this—probably imaginary—Army reader said was that the men were "changed." The story of "so many witnesses" testifying to the cloud of angels, with the German horses stampeding, was a pure invention on the part of Dr. Horton. There is no other conclusion probable. A more deliberate falsehood was never concocted.

But it is not to be expected that even Mr. Arthur Machen's complete exposure of the whole story will prevent Dr. Horton—and other clergymen—repeating it. The clergy are many, and the people who tell the truth and who love the truth, are few. So, in an article published four days after Mr. Machen's exposure, Dr. Horton writes that when—

"soldiers, and officers who were in the retreat from Mons, say that they saw a batch of angels between them and the enemy, and that the horses of the German cavalry stampeded, and that thus our troops were saved from destruction, no thoroughly modern man is foolish enough to disbelieve the statement or to pooh-pooh the experience as hallucination."

Observe, once more, that in the interview with Mr. Machen, Dr. Horton said nothing about these soldiers and officers. Then his only evidence-unproducedwas an unnamed Army reader. Left to himself, and some days afterwards, he again resurrects the officers and soldiers-still without giving their names. And I should not be at all surprised, if Dr. Horton and other clergymen go on repeating the story, that some witnesses will eventually be found. Consider how many witnesses were found in support of the passage of a hundred thousand Russians through England last September. They were seen and spoken to all over England. And it is quite as easy to see a legion of angels as a Russian Army—if people are so dis-posed. Of course, Dr. Horton might set suspicion at rest by producing the names of responsible individuals who saw the angels. But possibly his fine spiritual sense would shrink from subjecting a miracle to so mundane a test.

The Vicar of All Saints, Clifton, who published the story, says he has "been told that it is my duty to make public the names and ranks of the officers referred to"; but, he adds, "I am not prepared to produce irresistible proof of the truth of these statements, given in good faith by officers and men who were eye-witnesses of what they relate; to me it seems a matter of comparatively small importance whether it happened so or not." That is quite the right note-the Christian note; one may add, the historic Christian note. It is no importance whatever whether the statements made are true or not. The important thing is that they should be stated as truth, and that people should accept them as such. And the vicar closes his defence by saying that "we live more or less in an atmosphere of unbelief, and we are bound to take precautions to protect our-That covers everything, and it explains selves.' The miracle at Mons is precisely on the everything. lines of the other miracles by which the Christian Church has been supported. Credulity on the one side and cunning on the other. "Evidence" deliberately concocted to support Christian claims, and unblushing assurance when exposure is threatened. In other walks of life, if people are not ashamed of lying, they have at least the grace to be ashamed of being found out. The clergy appear to lack even this redeeming quality—poor as it is. "We must protect ourselves"! I do not say that the clergy would not prefer honest methods of defence if they were pos-sible; but it is evident that if these are not available, other methods are not held in contempt.

C. COHEN.

The Cleansing Power of War.

THE pulpit seems to have exhausted itself on the subject of Prussian Materialism. Possibly it has, at last, learned how utterly absurd its attitude was; how completely the facts discredited its assertions; and how, through ignorance encouraged by prejuli it manifested its total incapacity for the function public teaching. The clergy may have found of that Prussian Materialism was a myth of their or creation, though not one of them has had the bones to confess that they were all guilty of woefally leading their excessively docile hearers. Nothing the be more firmly established than the fact that the Kaiser's faith in God and loyalty to the Savior at beyond dispute and that the beyond dispute, and that he prides himself up having at his disposed on the prides himself up It is b having at his disposal an army of believers. It is boast that "God is only with the armies of believer, the Pro that "the troops of our enemies have not the primition of the troops of our enemies have not the primition, and know not what they are fighting for." Austin Harrison, the brilliant editor of the Energy Review, whom long residence is the transfer Review, whom long residence in Germany has quality of the such as to speak with authority, assures us that official Germany is profoundly religious, while a writer is the Cambridge Magazine more for the till and declare the Cambridge Magazine goes further still, and declart that a high wave of religious revival had decrease weeping over that country for some years before the true of the War broke out. In any case, whatever the tree planation of it may be, it is an underiable fact it the attitude of the pulpit has been wholly charge during the last few months. It now informs us the the War is a dreatic months. the War is a drastic punishment for the sins of Christendom in general Cold in the sins of God is now represented frowning upon and scourging the world for have forsaken him. The Rev. A. T. Corfield, rector Heanor, Derbyshire, believes that the War will cease until we return to our logical Heavenly Fatter cease until we return to our loving Heavenly Fall and undertake to serve him with all our hearts. Rev. R. J. Campbell expresses a somewhat different view, confessing, for ence his a somewhat and const view, confessing, for once, his ignorance and const quent inability to be descent of a stand of the

"Why Christ and then the rack? Why the adre of the Prince of Peace and to day the most terrible of all the ages? Frankly he did not know, but thought that he saw a glimpse of the reason, but moral advance had to be paid for. There were no about cuts to the Divine perfection."

Does the reverend gentleman really think that is War is God's method of helping mankind to advant morally? Is he honestly convinced that the Divin perfection is to be realised through a reckless in savage destruction of human life?

In the Burton Daily Mail for June 21 there ngthy report of 2 lengthy report of a sermon preached by Captor Tyrwhitt at St. Mary's Church, Rolleston, of whith he is rector. His text is The Rolleston, and it he is rector. His text is Hebrews ii. 10, and it is clause specially dwelt upon is, "Perfect tanger sufferings." The Canon says that he has had man questions put to him concerning the War, ed among which, perhaps, is this: "If God is a God love, how can be powerit this: "If God is a superior. love, how can he permit all this terrible suffering. go on which is so rampant in the world to day in the subscription of the solution of the solution is the solution of the solution of the solution of the solution is the solution must be reached by the solution of the solut answer. Suffering is the price which must be p for every moral advance. for every moral advance, the condition on which Divine perfection is attained Divine perfection is attainable. Let us examine it answer in its relation to the set of the the set clearly understood that we are by no means We the high disciplinary value of ordering. even prepared to endorse Nietzsche's statement a man's rank is almost determined by the amount bis artf even prepared to endorse Nietzsche's statement a man's rank is almost determined by the amon his suffering, or that without " the dischine suffering, of great suffering," all the elevation humanity produced in the past would have quite impracticable. Struggle is an essential dition of progress, and in all struggle there is dition of progress, and in all struggle is an estential or less pain. We say this in order to show the do not undervalue suffering Dat war is not do not undervalue suffering. But war is by timate struggle, nor is the suffering entailed by any true sense disciplinary. War is the ness civilised existence, the denial of the solidarity and race, and most of the solid rive is an set of the solidarity of race, and most of the suffering it causes is debuild ing. It is perfectly true that the world in which live is not a bed of roses with the world in which perfectly true that the world in which live is not a bed of roses ; it never was, and Follower will be ; but does not never was and ever never will be; but does any same person ever that war is calculated to rid it of one of its not is not a the crosses? War is a curse, not a cross, and the patience, but is not a thing to be endured with patience,

Jut dolis

tom which

Sat t stemi candid than a àt 16

same iem.

TOW

to be o Was i geners

nitael

Erons

acong a one the station of the state of the

nin on h

0110

1915

1 jadite.

ion c.

d oti

ir or:

onest y E's

ag car at the

OF AN

or -or -is b-rersi

B Pro-

ing

ali

minis ter ti

clarei bees

re

it the s that s that Christed si tor ill pro-

athe: The Ior

const in the

le sis bat be Short at the 130 )iria: 82.

e is i Juni which d

sarting bits a to be a

1

lei

10

tom the Christian point of view, the injustice to thich it gives rise is appalling. It is incontrovertible Dat the present War has already hurled millions to temity, and we are certain that Canon Tyrwhitt is addid and we are certain that Canon Tyrwhitt is addid enough to admit that not even a third of the addid enough to admit that not even a third of the addid were saved men; and if the Bible is true, all the reat have denoted in the lake that the fest have now their portion in the lake that anoth with fire and brimstone. Was it just to cut the off with fire and brimstone. Was it just to cut them off so suddenly while in a lost condition? Was worthy of a loving Heavenly Father to allow them bedropped internet in the provide set of the set of t bedropped into perdition in so heartless a fashion ? <sup>Vas</sup> it even fair to purchase the welfare of future <sup>Regetations</sup> at any strandous price? Fresh from <sup>143</sup> It even fair to purchase the welfare of future <sup>140</sup> restance at such a stapendous price? Fresh from <sup>140</sup> rithessing heartbreaking scenes and hearing won-<sup>140</sup> rithessing heartbreaking scenes and heartbreaking scenes and heartbreaking scenes and hearing scenes and heartbreaking scenes and heartbrea tone of the greatest blessings the world has ever ken, or ever will see." When asked on what grounds arrives at such a conclusion, all he can say is that Seting has saved the world, and is the salvation of salions and sa alions and individuals. We unhesitatingly chal-age the truth of that astounding declaration. When the world saved by the suffering attendant upon Instead of facing this difficulty, the reverend alleman slips off at a tangent to assert that Chriswity is by no means proved to be a failure because We submit that that is not the point at all, in-unch as Christianity, according to the interpreta-The point at issue is whether the world has The point at issue is whether the world have derived any genuine good from war or not; this the Canon does nothing towards settling.

Tyrwhitt avers that Christianity has not failed And Tyrwhitt avers that Christianity has not taken to be a seen building up nations. This con-tention is the direct opposite of true. Christianity has accornorated with the Roman Empire early in is a neorporated with the Roman Empire early in the fourth century, and by degrees the Roman Empire in never to rise again. If Christianity were true, is rould inevitably carry with it the complete demo-tion of nationalities. According to its ideal, all is and are God's children, and rightly form but one is y, God's family all other divisions and distincbeing done away with in Christ. Its prophecy the kingdoms of this world shall be swallowed the kingdoms of this world shall be successful the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ, that a religion for ever and ever as the sole hins. In being to individuals, not for nations, its one In heing to save souls, not nationalities. What has Unself virtually one for nationalities of the done for source that it has done All self virtually acknowledges that it has done All self virtually acknowledges that it has done According to him, there is not the other with him bet this is how he puts his the Christian nation under the sun. We this is how he puts his

Anyone who had studied the life of the German halon would find that every class of the community, and the second state of the community in had only recently been talking to a lady whose son the she could not understand why Christianity had become so stulined in Germany. It was like a nation by, salt damned Germany in its God-denying state!

What about Great Britain? Alas, "to-day Mate-the Was esting into the very heart of the vitals the nation"! The same thing is true also of the Russia, and Italy, as well as of Germany and the britain. On the Canon's own showing, Chris-the been building an national which now dis-<sup>12</sup> Britain, and Italy, as well as or de-ally has been building up nations which now dis-their very Maker, which is equivalent to been a that as a builder-up of nations Christianity demonstrates and aimplicity the reverend gentleman gion whose well-naid representative and champion and the charge and set of the reli-whose well-paid representative and interactionally is. and the spell of materialistic conceptions and Basis are now undergoing their Baphometic Fire-<sup>deals</sup>, are now undergoing their Baphometic Fire-table war of all the ages could supply; and the reverend Canon seeks to comfort us with the assurance that when this heart-searching discipline of the nations is complete, God will intervene, and every individual shall be different, because all will have become almost perfect through suffering! Was ever such unmitigated nonsense indulged in before, even in the name of God? If there were a God, he would hide his face for very shame on hearing such undiluted trash uttered on his assumed authority, and utterly disown such traducers of his holy character. Canon Tyrwhitt's temerity knows no check. It is undeniable that all the wars of the past did religion more harm than good. The Franco-Prussian War of 1870 regenerated neither Prussia nor France, and ultimately the Churches lost much more than they gained. The same thing is true of the recent South African War, as well as of every other war of which we have record. But this War is going to be an exception to all its predecessors. Here are Canon Tyrwhitt's confident words on the subject :-

"When the War closed they would not return to the old England as it was. England would never again be the England it was before August, 1914. To-day, England was greater and purer than it had ever been before, and it would be even greater in the future."

As soon as the War is over the British people will have become "almost perfect through suffering." Such, we are told, is the cleansing power of war. The Bishop of London is somewhat more modest in his expectations. Even God, he tells us, cannot have his own way in everything. His omnipotence is simply a theological dream which has never been fulfilled in history. He can only get out of each age the morality of which the age is naturally capable, and he has always been obliged "to let his people choose the Gospel of the Second Best." Even the discipline of war never bears the fruit it ought to bear. We both pity and despise the Bishop's God; and we are satisfied that the cleansing power of war exists only in the religious imagination. It is as intangible and unverifiable as Dr. Horton's angels.

J. T. LLOYD.

The Sea and Literature.

"The multitudinous seas."—SHAKESPEARE. "O fair, green-girdled mother."—SWINBURNE.

"Who shall put forth on thee, Unfathomable sea."-SHELLEY.

AT a time when the British Navy is scouring the seas in battle array, it is curious to reflect that until a few years ago we never had a poet of the sea in the sense that we have had poets of chivalry, of love, and of the delight of battle. Let anyone recall the epics and romances, the narrative verse, the dramas, songs, sonnets, odes and lyrics that our poets have left us, and let him ask how much of this enormous amount of poetry has been written to glorify the sea, or to celebrate the romance of a sailor's life.

The sea, doubtless, has always come into English poetry. From the far-off days of Cynewolf onwards, the poets have never been able to forget it for long. But it is to men of the nineteenth century that we must incline our ears for intimate language of the sea, and for its imagery too. And fine sea poetry has invariably been written by landsmen. Sailors' chanties are delightful nonsense, in which the seavoyage is but a means to an inglorious end-usually a dockside public-house or a light-of-love. The two English poets who had a real acquaintance with the sea were William Falconer and Thomas Lodge, both of whom were seafaring men. Falconer's Shipwreck is more Johnsonian than briny, and Lodge's masterpiece was Rosalynde, which is as nautical as As You Like It.

Among the great sea-poets, is he who perished in the sea. In Shelley we come very near fathoming the spirit of the sea. "Measureless," "unresting," "tre-mendous," "false," are some of Shelley's impressions of the ocean. The "deaf sea," the "homeless sea," the "abandoned sea," are a few descriptions of the power which was to claim him at the last. Shelley's imagery is well-nigh perfect; we can hear the sea as his lines attack our memory. Who would not linger with the poet :-

Where the pebble-paven shore, Under the quick, faint kisses of the sea, Trembles and sparkles as with ecstasy."

Listen to this magnificent passage from The Ode to the West Wind :--

" Far below,

The sea-blooms and the oozy woods, which wear The sapless foliage of the ocean, know Thy voice, and suddenly grow grey with fear, And tremble and despoil themselves."

Shelley from the first seemed destined by the sea for its own. From his boyhood he loved to watch the drifting of paper boats down a stream, and thought that drowning would be a beautiful death. Three times he escaped shipwreck, but the sea and the ships absorbed him with a fatal fascination. His first wife sought the same mode of death which at last fell upon the poet. Shelley prophesied his own death, though few have noticed it. In Julian and Maddalo he makes Maddalo, who was intended for his friend, Byron, address to him a jesting warning :--

"You were ever still Among Christ's flock a perilous infidel-A wolf for the meek lambs."

And the warning concludes :-

"Beware if you can't swim."

The recurrence of this thought in Shelley's poetry is singular. The last lines in Adonais might be read as an anticipation of his own death by drowning. In Alastor we read :-

" A restless impulse urged him to embark And meet lone death on the drear ocean's waste."

The superb Ode to Liberty closes on the same pathetic note :

" As waves, which lately paved his watery way, Hiss round a drowner's head in their tempostuous play."

The Stanzas Written in Dejection echo the same thought :-

And I might feel in the warm air

My cheek grow cold, and hear the sea Breathe o'er my dying brain its last monotony."

In a dirge written in 1817 he gives vent to the idea:-" That time is dead for ever, child-

Drowned, frozen, dead for ever."

But above all English poets, Algernon Swinburne is the poet of the sea. His love of ocean is not merely sensuous. That delight he has rendered wonderfully in his Tristram of Lyonesse :---

"He watched the dim sea with a deepening smile, And felt the sound and savor and swift flight Of wayes that fled beneath the fading light

And died before the darkness, like a song With harps between and trumpets blown along."

His finest sea pieces are born, not of sensuous enjoyment, but of imaginative insight and sympathy. None has so vividly rendered the magic of the dawn breaking over the rippled deep, or the terrors of the trumpets of the night. Among the cruellest abstractions of the cosmos he exults; he drinks the ether of space as men drink wine.

Byron was a famous swimmer, and his apostrophe to the ocean in Childe Harold's Pilgrimage has the right ring about it :-

"His steps are not upon thy paths—thy fields Are not a spoil for him—thou dost arise And shake him from thee; the vile strength he wields For earth's destruction thou dost all despise, Spurning him from thy bosom to the skies, And send'st him, shivering in thy playful spray, And howling to his gods, where haply lies His petty hope in some near port or bay, And dashest him again to earth; there let him lay."

Certainly the sea in storm makes the best poetry, and from those in peril on the deep the imagination turns naturally to the watching and waiting sufferers at home. Henry Kendal, in a pathetic poem, sums up the agony of such a vigil :---

But of the wreckage of the grey morning after the storm, few have written more tenderly than Charles Kingslev:

'Oh! is it weed, or fish, or floating hair ?-

A tress of golden hair, A drowned maiden's hair,

Above the nets at sea!

Was never salmon yet that shone so fair Among the stakes of Dee.

They rowed her in across the rolling foam-

Tennyson's sea-pictures would make a stody themselves:

"The plunging seas draw backward from the land Their moon-led waters white.

Listening now to the tide in its broad-flung shipwrecking Now to the scream of a maddened beach dragged down by the waves.

Crisp foam flakes scud along the level sand, Torn from the fringe of spray."

Coleridge, despite the "sunless sea" of Kubla Analysis and The Ancient Mariner, was too prone to moralist in the presence of the access W prometh hids n

Keats thought of the great waters rather as a treasure of magic, a world which he could people with the creatures of his with the creatures of his gorgeous fancy. He makes splendid use of this, as in his ever-memorable lines.

"Like stout Cortez, when with eagle eyes He stared at the Pacific—and all his men Looked at each other with a wild surmise– Silent, upon a peak in Darien."

In other words he speaks of the ocean's "pure able tion round earth's human shores," and of "perios seas in facry lands forlorn." In Matthew Arnold, with find the low Virgilian cry, the sense of tears in more things, that sobs in undertance through his trange things, that sobs in undertone through his trangel

"Listen! you hear the grating rear Of pebbles while the waves draw back and find. At their return up the high strand, Begin and cease, and then again begin. With tremulous cadence slow, and bring The eternal note of sadness in."

Among Rossetti's shorter poems the musical mi ancholy Sea Limits :

occupies a prominent place, but one of his south

"From this wave-washed mound Unto the farthest flood-brim look with me; Then reach on with thy thought till it be drown'd. Miles and miles distant though the last line be, And though thy soul sails leagues and leagues beyond. Still, leagues beyond those leagues, there is more sea.

There is a choice of dainty pictures in the verse (

William Morris, such as:

"And underneath his feet the moonlit sea Went shepherding his waves disorderly."

Went shepherding his reet the moonre are Walt Whitman confessed that all his attempts and the Hills who shall say the tribution has not set and the Hills who shall say that Kipling has not sot

"Who hath desired the Sea-the immense and contempt uous surges? The shudder, the stamble, the swerve, ere the star stabbing bowsprit emerges— The orderly clouds of the trades and the ridg'd round sapphire thereunder— Unheralded cliff-haunting flaws and the head sail's low volleying thunder?"

volleying thunder?" To Robert Bridges, ships and the sea are one indivisible, and he has expressed the wonder and witchery of the wanderers in wroth waters :-Whither O splendid ship thy white alls crowding. Leaning across the bosom of the urgent west. That fearest not sea rising nor sky-clouding, is Whither away, fair rover, and what thy mest Ah ! soon when Winter has all our west operation. When skies are cold and misty, and hail a Wilt thou glide on the blue Pacific, or rest In a summer haven asleep, thy white sails the the magic of the sea and shipping has blue and and an and shipping has witchery of the wanderers in great waters

Yet the magic of the sea and shipping has a prose-writer.

Ju.

repre Perle

150

8

h

h

0

Bį,

a

要 語 話 到 载

Wh

The

int.

Izain

C bi

01 bi bi bas o go i ago pasti i vis o go i ago i ag tune i Inte i They rowed her in across the folling foam The cruel, crawling foam, The cruel, hungry foam, To her grave beside the sea. But still the boatmen hear her call the cattle home Across the sands of Dee."

in the presence of the ocean. Wordsworth bids of

"Have sight of Proteus rising from the sea, And hear old Triton blow his wreathed horn."

g15

/ 日世

aries ay in ng,

,n

The

isini D8."

85 5

eople akes

98.

bla loa , we agail

me

Del

00

all st

D.

tas written nobly of ships in his Harbours of England, book conceived in praise and illustration of Turner's Dagailicent drawings. Ruskin had the true sea-Passion. He knew London and its good, grey river, Be wood seen the splendor of the Adriatic at dawn. Be was not a sea-rover like Herman Melville, and he as not born to stand at the wheel. But he saw as lew men see, and wrote as few men can hope to write. There is in English literature no more stirring lanstage concerning the magic of the sea and the rap-tage of the seaman. Boats had for him an endless indination, particularly the undecked sea-boat. That represented a miracle of human achievement, the perfect adaptation of means to ends. The boat's bow, he says, is "naively perfect":-

"The man who made it knew not he was making asything beautiful as he bent the planks into those hyptanic beautiful as he bent the planks under his hand, into the image of a sea-shell, the seal, as it were, of the flowing of the flowing of cocean of the flowing of the great tides and streams of ocean stamped on its delicate rounding. He leaves it, when all is done, without a boast. It is a simple work, but it will keep out the state of the state will keep out water. And every plank thenceforward is a Fate, and has men's lives wreathed in the knots of "a rate, and has men's lives wreathed in the Knows of it, as the cloth yard shaft had their deaths in the plames. The nails that fasten together the planks of the boat's prow are the rivets of the fellowship of the world. Their iron does more than draw lightning out heaven; it loads have seend the earth." heaven; it leads love round the earth."

There is more real beauty in the ordinary fishing-tat than in the decorated galleys. Says Ruskin

"Nothing that ever swung at the quay sides of Carthage, or glowed with Crusaders' shields above the bays of Syria, could give to any contemporary human creature such an idea of the meaning of the word <sup>creature</sup> <sup>such</sup> an idea of the meaning of the word <sup>boat</sup>, as may be now gained by any mortal happy <sup>enough</sup> to behold as much as a Newcastle collier <sup>beating</sup> against the wind."

The fascination of the sea lies in the magic of the They carry the imagination to enchanted add and upon desperate voyages. They are the tols of unconquerable endeavor, and, at the last, I lest.

MIMNERMUS.

Man and His Mother Earth.

The buman family is as strictly terrestrial in its tore as the order of fishes is aquatic. It is ad-hited that as marking has advanced in knowledge witted that as mankind has advanced in knowledge and power it has asserted an ever strengthening be stead over the rivers, lakes, and seas. But the great ocean highways and the navigable streams statistics and the navigable sureau alike employed mainly for the purpose of coneving man and man's commodities from one part of the solid earth to another.

To understand a people one must know something and earth to another. I its earthly environment. Mountain and valley, aten atenno and valley, or and the steppe and productive soil, tropical, arctic, or the steppe and productive soil, tropical, arctic, or the steppe and productive soil, tropical, arctic, or the steppe and productive or humidity of geographical states or sea. and steppe and productive soil, tropical, around, and a steppe and productive soil, tropical, around, and a strate climate, aridity or humidity of geographia sorroundings, easy access to the stream or sea, the proverty or conclusion of the mineral deposits of the prverty or opulence of the mineral deposits of the backhoring area, all these, with countless other of the proverty of the mineral deposits of the mineral deposite of the alghboring area, all these, with countless out instrial phenomena unceasingly influence the lives the dwellers in the anticalar habitat. the dwellers in any particular habitat. The social and economic conditions of a community above all all conomic conditions of a community

the social and economic conditions of a community approximation and economic approximation and the site an almost instinctive human desire to annex be territory of instinctive human desire to annex the date generation for manners desire to among the date generations of another, are to be reckoned among generation of another, are to be reckoned among the territory of another, are to be reckoned among of the main generators of wars with all their aftermath high fering and the prehistoric and early the conquest or retention of favored regions of the Conquest or retention of favored regions of the Daring the historical period, every State has it a leading feature of its policy to safeguard able provide the storical period, every state has able frontiers while never neglecting any favorthe leading feature of its policy to safeguard able opportunity to encroach on the landed posses-The British siles seem but a small speck on the map, but those countries and continents marked red make up no inconsiderable portion of the earth's surface. Yet India, Africa, Australia, Canada, Egypt, and the other unconsidered trifles which collectively comprise the British Empire, have been successively added to the English Crown by the genius and enterprise of an overcrowded island race.

Land hunger played a predominant part in the colonial settlements of ancient Greece as also in the territorial expansion of ancient Rome. This factor operated in the wanderings of the barbarian Teutons and Huns who ultimately overthrew the Roman Empire. It is true that empire building is not entirely conditioned by dire necessity for outward expansion. But the geographical circumstances of the home country are fundamentally responsible for the exploitation of weaker States.

The colonial policy at different dates pursued by Spain, Portugal, Holland, France, and England was determined by the environmental requirements of the respective States. The career of latter-day The Germany illustrates the same general law. campaigns of Frederic the Great were directed to strongthen the rising Prussian power. In 1864, the same State again strengthened her frontiers but now increased her territory at the expense of Denmark. In 1866, Prussia crushed Austria in a five weeks' campaign, and although the victor demanded no territory, and sought no indemnity, the defeated Empire was forced to pay forty million thalers, and ceased to count as the leading German power. The way was thus prepared for the overthrow of France in 1870, which was followed by a terrible treaty which bereft our Gallic neighbor of two of her fairest provinces and imposed the payment of two hundred millions sterling. The much discussed problem of the balance of power in Europe is ultimately governed by the almost universal desire to encroach on the one hand while maintaining territorial integrity on the other. The Near Eastern and the Far Eastern questions both illustrate the same law, while a further example is furnished by the Monroe Doctrine, which makes so wide an appeal in the United States.

With the exception of Buckle, Draper, Spencer, and a few other historians and sociologists, social inquirers have seldom attached sufficient importance to the influences exerted by geographic environment on the rise and progress of the human race. The German scientist and evolutionary philosopher, Friedrich Ratzel, was deeply influenced by the sociological and biological teachings of Herbert Spencer, some of whose conclusions Ratzel set himself to work out with characteristic Teutonic thoroughness. Among his various contributions to anthropological science must be included his "Anthropo-Geographie." This extremely ponderous work sadly needed an interpreter, and Ellen Churchill Semple, in her highly important Influences of Geographic Environment, has placed the master's message before the Englishspeaking world in a large volume which is packed with arguments, illustrations, and facts.

The new science of Anthropo-Geography concerns itself with far-reaching phenomena, which include almost every aspect of human existence. An attempt will be made in these articles to survey this vust subject from one extremely interesting and by no means subordinate standpoint. In the words of social forces, economic and psychologic, which socio-logists regard as the cement of societies; but he has something to add. He sees in the land occupied by a primitive tribe or a highly organised State, the under-lying material bond holding society together, the ulti-mate basis of their fundamental social activities, which are therefore derivatives from the land. He sees the common territory exercising an integrating force-weak in primitive communities where the group has estab-lished only a few slight temporary relations with its soil.....He sees it growing stronger with every advance in civilisation involving more complex relations with the land-with settled habitations, with increased density of population, with a discriminating and highly differentiated use of the soil, with the exploitation of mineral resources, and finally with that far reaching exchange of commodities and ideas which means the establishment of varied extra-territorial relations.'

422

When a society has pressed into its corvice the most productive powers of its native soil and is able to adequately utilise its mineral wealth in the interest of its manufactures, the need for foreign markets for its surplus commodities renders imperative its extra-territorial expansion. Now, the success of a State is largely a matter of its environment. The arctic regions, the desert areas, and other handicapped countries farnish few opportunities for the evolution of civilised life. In our more fortunate isles, on the other hand, countless favorable circum-stances have conspired to make our habitation the object of the wonder and envy of mankind.

It cannot be claimed that the Bible is the secret of England's greatness nor is it likely that the British have taken the place formerly occupied by the Jews as God's chosen people. Nor is it altogether true that our race's prized position is entirely due to its innate superiority in wisdom and morals. The expla-nation is found in things far more material than these. In relation to the earth as a whole, our geographical position is one of the finest in the world. Our people have enjoyed a prolonged period of profound internal peace. The last battle of conof profound internal peace. The last battle of con-sequence fought on our soil in the South was in the seventeenth century, on the stricken field of Sedgemoor. While Spain and Italy, Germany, Austria, and France have been in turn overrun by the conquering invader, the soil of England has remained unsullied.

Britain's Isles are not invulnerable, and never have been. The Roman colonisation of the South was of vast service to our race. The prehistoric and historic Scandinavian, Danish, Saxon, and Norman settlements enriched our blood, and it is to be observed that all these peoples wandered to our shores from the neighborhood of the North Sea.

To some extent the Romans reached us from the opposite side of the Channel, and the Normans were originally dwellers of the borderlands of the North Oar absorption of the more progressive conti-Sea. nentals who later came to us to escape the persecution of their religious and secular rulers, not only helped to improve our stock but materially assisted in building up several of our most important textile industries, and aided in our agricultural evolution. Again, the British Isles possess one of the best of climates, despite all our complaints of the withering east winds of spring and the lowering skies that frequently oppress us at all seasons of the year. Our soil is immensely productive. English hops, apples, cereals, vegetables, and cherries are second to none. The olive and the vine are for sunnier lands, but British horses, cattle, sheep, poultry, and pigs are above and beyond compare. Coal and iron in the richest abundance, and a population which our rigorous and bracing weather conditions serve to keep strong and active, are a few of the factors which immediately occur to one as helping to elucidate the prominent position occupied by the British people.

Yet all these varied phenomena ultimately relate to the land over which the air sweeps, upon which the sun sheds his light and heat, and to which the clouds shower their copious contents. From the bounteous earth we derive all our food and drink and the mineral commodities which ultimately enable us to purchase from abroad all necessaries and luxuries of life of non-native origin.

When a primitive people is not well-rooted to the soil, the economic waste is enormous. Migratory hunting races are compelled to wander over vast tracts of country in search of game, and with these no deep attachment to any special area is possible. In a hunting tribe slightly more advanced, the early social landowner may be seen. Tribal ownership was clearly exhibited by the Comanches, "nomad horse Indians who occupied the grassy plains of Northern Texas." Giddings informs us that these savages regarded their plains as the common posses-sion of the tribe, and they carefully guarded their territory and its game from the incursions of fareign In the next stage of development Indians. hunter combines a rude agriculture with the p ceeds of the chase. At every ascending stage social evolution the territory, to which the the becomes more and more attached, slowly imposed soil value upon the people to an ever-increasical degree. Low as they were in the scale of savagent the Australian races based their social structure of their landed possessions. Spencer and Gillen hat shown that in North Contra in the and Gillen hat shown that in North Central Australia, even with very thin population, the natives of that region have succeeded in fixing themselves to the port stricken soil, and that the tribal boundaries bar become so settled that armed conflict between tribes brings tribes brings no change of territory. "Land at people," comments Ellen Semple,-

"are identified. The bond is cemented by their put tive religion, for the tribe's spirit ancestors occup this special territory. In like manner a very definition conception of tribal ownership of land prevails and the Bushmen and Bechuanas of South Africa; and the pastoral Hereros the alignation of their land the pastoral Hereros the alienation of their and i

For good or ill, a tribe of hunters can nere become a large community. What domestic labor required is performed by the strate required is performed by the squaw, while the same devotes himself to the fabrication of weapons, to the pursuit of game, and the overthrow of human enemies. In such circumstances small cohesion possible, and the hunting exception soon experpossible, and the hunting organisation soon erection and the hunting organisation soon erection and an and a segregates into locate an increased population and a segregates into locate an increased population and a segregates into locate and a segregates into locate and a segregates into locate and a segregate and a segregates into lesser groups. Thus we observe by the life of the nomadic hunter is determined by the faunal conditions of his territory, with which his very existence is inserve the data as gate. very existence is inseparably associated. As game grows scarce, or as the tribe multiplies, the hunter is forced to seek new game haunts, as other wise he will perish from here and haunts, as other wise he will perish from lack of food.

T. F. PALMER.

(To be continued.)

Acid Drops.

Lord Justice Phillimore was one of the speakers it is Church Reform League the other day. In the course of be remarks his Lordship said that what was needed was big Parliamentary enactment that would enable the Church big Parliamentary enactment that would enable the on of England to manage its compared we units sgree of England to manage its own affairs. We quite agree this, and we angreet to Louis affairs. this, and we suggest to Justice Phillimore that what is needed is for the State to loss of the state of the s needed is for the State to leave religion alone really along that when the state to leave religion along In contract that we imagine is here? In contra But that, we imagine, is hardly what he desires. In com-with many Churchmen, what he wants is the support religion, to protect it, to favor it, and then even Church quite along when the arrangement of Church quite alone when it comes to the arrangement it is of own doctrines. But if the State pays for religion, it is shall be taught.

It is a pity that a man like Mr. Justice Phillimore does give his support to absolute freedom of religion in the support to absolute freedom of religion. Instantiation of the Blashamy Laws. including the abolition of the Blasphemy Laws. this, he appears to regard them as necessary and, in form or other, admirable. We remember that in the Blasphemy case he sought to counter the argument that the Blasphemy below were obsolete on the ground that a law was pic-obsolete until it was repealed. This is one of oldy, solete," after all, only means something that is on of is and no one can deny that the Blasphemy Laws that category, even though they may be revived from that category, even though they may be revived from is ropealed, laws are constantly being repealed for avowed reason that they have become obsolete.

Civilised clergymen and uncivilised medicine medicine in the same limited vocabulary. Dr. J. H. Joweth, see the Fifth Avenue Prochet in the New York much the same limited vocabulary. Dr. J. H. Jowerst of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New Earl is visiting London, has approximate this mind on the is visiting London, has unburdened his mind on the Europe War, which he says is "a resurgence of devilry.

The Church of Christ is compelled to move with the times, and Russian aviators now have their patron with the Muscovite ecclosiastics having designated the prophetical states and the prophetical states are the prophetical states and the prophetical states are the prophetical states and the prophetical states are the

JULY 4, 1915

for that chariot deserve

JUI

Sot avi ster a TARTIO ampai atk di BOG Len Li があり Lare t

aving trais. Anoun Karistick Stack

It is

Giery Ciery Call

A page of the second se

Fa D'in

1915

1 oreig

at the e par ige i trite see its easing ageri. are E bart.

with a a bari verty bars en the d ac

print cup lefin. and angi

Der:

avage

amst

ion ii n and e hor

y the gami

rade other

ER.

at of a man at

02

light

1 24

State State

icer icer

bill a

the office because he was conveyed to heaven in a fiery thot, We should have thought that the firework-makers secred the honor better.

Not to be outdone by other religionists, the Jewish Chief habi has donned khaki, and taken his chaplain with him a visit to the Front. So they are all taking a trip, and more and pose as military experts for the rest of the radius. And what a splendid object-lesson these visits the atime of national danger most people are ready to As a time of national danger most people are ready to differences and unite for a common purpose. Political social differences are, for the time being, forgotten; and in live together, and, if necessary, die together. The key and ridiculous walls separating Catholic and Pro-ter and in the leaders of religion do their the togethat no breach is made therein. At a time of national danger most people are ready to the to see that no breach is made therein.

It is not fair to blame the clergy for not doing, or for not his not fair to blame the clergy for not doing, or for not done, anything for the nation during the present domain done must remember how hard they worked at the crowds of drunken workmen—who were not a babies "—who only existed in their own imagination. We are services that deserve remembrance. And now, the to the fore. The latest suggestion is for the mobilisa-d religion. All that is meant by the phrase is not ad of everybody praying on his own, there is to be an the work of everybody praying on his own, there is to be an the to be mysad of everybody praying on his own, there is to be an add of everybody praying on his own, there is to be an add en masse. When this is done we shall, in some mys-togs way, have "mobilised our national strength," and as will go on in a more satisfactory manner. All we to say is that when a nation can tolerate solemn tom-To say is that when a nation can tolerate solemn tom-to say is that when a nation can tolerate solemn tom-to calling it civilised.

An earthquake has taken place in Germany, and the towns beingen and Balingen have been shaken. As the report is that no great damage has been done, are we to conclude Providence is still on the side of the big battalions?

by the German armies. Does the Bishop ever read to Bishop ever read to Bishop ever read by the German armies. Does the Bishop ever read to be early books.

The Daily Mirror retails a story that Sir John French says The Daily Mirror retails a story that Sir John French says an army in which every soldier read his Bible would be predictionary Force, for it includes Jews, Catholics, Sikhs, if reethickers.

Provincial paper, describing a well-known public man, "his hair is completely changed into an old man, and walks with his grey." Hair that walks is good, and it to of the amusing description in Genesis, "He heard the day,"

The Young Men's Christian Association is clamoring, in page advertisements in the daily newspapers, for cash route "aleeping accommodation" to serve as "centres but we realised that the Church of Christ was fast on the why advertise the fact so publicly ?

Anther of Christian bishops met together in solemn to Godeneion arrived at was that "War is the result of sin, "It is this kind of stupidity that makes one almost is of human reason. War is the result of sin! Whose this was reason. War is the result of sin! Whose this of all the ruined homes, and maimed lives, of all at the almost is the almost is the almost is the almost is the start of the sole almost is the almost is the sole war, and then try and the solution of all the ruined homes, and maimed lives, of an lise the almost incredible idiocy of a congress of bishops and solemnly inform the world that " war is the result and brutality of this War, and the amost incredible idiocy of a congress of bishops and solemnly inform the world that "war is the result and God permits it all so as not to interfere with the same society declining to arrest a thief or a murderor The seson,

The Bishop of Birmingham says that "if the Germans the bishop of Birmingham says that "if the Germans from the beat, we should be putting back the clock of the user, "His lordship must be suffermainspring of the Christian clock broke down at Jerusalem two thousand years ago.

According to the newspapers, "a handsome sum" has been realised for a book written by a domestic servant. There is nothing fresh in this. The clergy have made a heap of money from the "sermon" of a "carpenter."

The Rev. R. J. Campbell has been asking questions, and one is, "Why did the tide of divine love roll in so far and then roll back?" Littlo Paul Dombey asked a similarly useful question when he inquired, "What are the wild waves saying?"

Among the "Voices of the Day" quoted by the Christian World for June 24 is this pre-eminently false and foolish one from a student in a Yorkshire College: "Before the War England was a land of pleasure; now it is a land of prayer." Both clauses in that sentence are equally untrue. England was not a land of pleasure prior to the War, nor is it now a land of prayer. If anyone would take the trouble to watch the streets of London or Manchester between the hours of 7 and 8 on a Sunday evening, he would discover that the masses care nothing about prayer, and that while picture palaces are crowded, most churches and chapels are empty. Now, granting for argument's sake that the sentence just quoted is true, how amazingly incongruous is the sentence that immediately follows it: "Surely the Kaiser is to blame for this." If England has been transformed from a pleasureloving to a prayer-offering land by the War, churches and chapels should pass a most enthusiastic vote of thanks to the Kaiser, instead of blaming him.

Dr. Jowett admits that, after nineteen centuries of the Christian religion, we are now "witnessing a resurgence of devilry which is truly appalling." If those words mean any-thing, they certainly convey the idea that God in Christ is a conspicuous failure, or that he has been dethroned by his Majesty of the Bottomless Pit. The reverend gentleman emphasises his admission thus: "The baser passions have been aggressionly frichtful and a cruel animalism is at large. been aggressively frightful, and a cruel animalism is at large, and it is like a raging, boiling sea which has burst its dykes.' This being the case, why on earth does Dr. Jowett still act as an ambassador of a defeated and demolished Deity? The Prince of Peace has never had his day, and, judging by the signs of the times, he shall never have it. Consequently, the ministers of religion are useless and injurious survivals of the Ages of Faith.

Judging from the puff preliminary in the pious press, Brother Billy Sunday should be with us before long. Some biographical details of the revivalist appeared recently in the Westminster Gazette, and in it we were told that Billy was "happiest" while "battling with booze," and that "scores" of towns had "gone dry" in consequence of his preaching in America. If Billy uses the American dialect in his ser-mons in this country, he will drive people to drink.

Billy Sunday, like all Christians, admits that he is a "miserable sinner," and in his sontimental account of his old home he says that when he revisited the place " the long weary nights of sin and of hardship became as though they had never been." Only an idealist could twang the lyre in this fashion.

Writing of books used by officers on active service, a daily paper says "the Bible is easily first." Is that so? We thought almost every officer carried the Field Service Pocket Book, a summary of military text-books.

The Baltimore American suggests that "Onward, Christian Soldiers !" should be replaced by "Onward, Christian Sub-marines !"

Dr. Horton, by his sermon and articles on the angelic intervention at Mons and in the Dardanelles, has played beautifully into the hands of the arch-enemy he used to attack with such violent bitterness, the Catholic Church. The Catholic Herald for June 26 is delighted with his strange action, and politely reminds him that his persecution of Romanism is now a logical impossibility. It says :-

"A man who, like Dr. Horton, regards some of the reports of miracles on the battlefield as 'completely authen-ticated,' cannot logically dismiss as superstition the Catholic miracles which are better authenticated still. Truly, the greatest miracle of all is the change the War is making on Protestants themselves."

The curious thing is that Dr. Horton's "completely authen-ticated" miracle had never been heard of until after Mr. Arthur Machen wrote his legendary sketch last September, and that absolutely no first-hand evidence is adduced in support of the belief in it.

In the same issue the Catholic Herald informs us that in the district of Earlsfield, S.W., only one person in eleven attends any place of worship, and that in the heart of Mayfair a large Anglican church can only muster eighty persons at a Sunday service. The same thing is true of nearly all other centres, which only shows how utterly false is the claim made by many prominent men of God that the War is bringing about everywhere a wonderful revival of interest in religion. As a matter of fact, the War is dealing religion the deadliest blow it has ever experienced.

The late Mr. James Duffield, of Cockermouth, who left a fortune of half a million, began life as a pitboy in a colliery. If there is any truth in the Christian religion, he will renew his acquaintance with coals in the next world.

The London Central Young Men's Christian Association appears to be extending its business. Its latest advertisement states that the organisation can deal with cases of "insufficient chest development." This should be tidings of great joy to the numerous flat-chested Christians.

Fearfully and wonderfully made are the servants of the God of Peace. One of them, the Rev. W. Kingscote Greenland, has the audacity to assert that " if it were not for its terrible side, there is nothing so fascinating as war." What is war? The New Standard Dictionary defines it as "a contest between nations or states, or between different parties in the same state, carried on by force and with arms." other words, war is bloodshed on a large scale, the art of scientific killing. On all sides alike, which are all terrible, war is wholesale murder. And yet here is a minister of omnipotent and incarnate Love who coolly tells us that "there is nothing so fascinating as war." Indeed, Mr. Greenland goes so far as to say that as a cure for doubt and morbidity there is nothing to compare with "contact with the simple, hardy, affectionate nature of Kitchener's New Army." What noxt, O man of God?

Sir William Robertson Nicoll has returned to his piety, faith, and prayer, after his brief excursion into the camp of the materialistic politicians; and the tone of his leading article in the British Weekly for June 24 is characteristic of the man who puts his trust in God. In former articles, he had dwelt with great seriousness on the absolute necessity of providing our army with an unlimited supply of high explosive shells and machine guns, for lack of which our just, God approved, cause might be finally lost during the next few months; but in the present article he emphasises his belief "that, if we do our part, we shall not be without reinforcements from the higher Will that rules." Does not Sir William see that, if there be "a higher Will that rules," it should vindicate itself by succoring the weak against the it should vindicate itself by succoring the weak against the strong, by giving the victory to right and justice, however powerfully and fiercely they may be threatened by over-whelming might? If our Allies are strong enough to win the War by force of their superior arms, where and how does the "higher Will that rules" come in at all? If there be such a Will, it can only manifest itself by crushing wight however well cominned when it sime at the overthrow might, however well equipped, when it aims at the overthrow of right. Has God ever so revealed himself?

The Dean of Durham thinks that one consequence of the The Dean of Durham thinks that one consequence of the War may be a religious revival, which will take the form of a return to long discarded superstitions. This is, of course, probable, and it is instructive to note that the Dean accom-panies this statement with two other expectations. There is to be a period of acute social distress, and a weakening of social ties and obligations. Read together, the result is that with a setting back of social organisation, and the reduction of life to a lower level there will come a revised of armer of life to a lower level, there will come a revival of super-stition. And provided the two latter things take place, we also would expect the first to become a fact. Life is a connected whole, and anything that affects a part affects the whole. Consequently, to effect a lowering of the level of social life means a move in the direction of those conditions with which religion is in natural alliance. No one who understands the nature of religious belief will question that. The question for the religionist to face is, Why religion should invariably weaken with the advance of civilisation, and regain strength with any return to lower social conditions?

The newspapers state that the Pope has two nephews in the Army. Poor papa! His principles and his petticoats prevent him fighting. Besides, he is beyond the age limit, unless the authorities form a Centenarians' Brigade.

Commen -How differently they do things in France. Commen-on the death of Lieut. Warneford, who was killed in aeroplane accident, L'Auto, Paris, said his career "stopped by a cruel destiny." Here, in England, the Fi-journalists would have written that the deceased was "jeut to Jesus."

War-time economics are invading the Churches, and still Primitive Methodist Conference at Reading an appen-made that money should be spent at home among members of the Church rather than on missionaries. the colored folk be glad to hear the news?

Miss Marie Corelli, writing in the Daily Graphic on the present position of women, says "they are realising that is cult of Abraham, which consisted in driving his women align with his cattle to the music of the heat of the state of the state. with his cattle to the music of the lashing of whips, is not a thing of the past." We should like to hear Miss Cortargue this matter out with Mar Control to hear Miss Cort argue this matter out with Mrs. Sarah Abraham.

From the point of view of Churchmen, it is high time is some protest was made against the absurdities of the Bield of London. From the point of view of Freethinkers, if must have bishops, men of the trace of Dichor Ingram st must have bishops, men of the type of Bishop Ingram st most desirable. But Professor State of the type of Bishop inst fr must have bishops, men of the type of Bishop Ingram st most desirable. But Professor Scott Holland has just fi-tested against the Bishop calling the War a "Holy and says, "We will not ask the clergy to become lis Mullahs preaching a Jehad," and another clergyman is Loch, says that the Bishop has lost all sense of proportion A sense of proportion of anything Bishop Ingram pro-some time as disturbing to his easily disturbed mental equa-brium as were his preaching about onslanghts on Freethousit brium as were his preaching about onslaughts on Freethoust in East London.

The writer of the leading article in the Christian Colonwealth for June 28 meland monwealth for June 23 makes the naive admission that no country (with the provided no country (with the possible exception of Russia) do it churches either nold or represent the voice of the people A truer remark was never made. The people have able the neople doned the churches, and the churches have no real care is the people. In reality, all churches exist alone for their or sakes, and have no message whether the people was whe people. In reality, all churches have no real their ord sakes, and have no message whatever to the outlying wai Ministers often speak as if they ruled the world, where as a matter of fact, the world pays not the slightest head?

"England expects the Clergy of all denominations will now do their Duty, using the pulpit as a platform to origination of the poly of the pulpit as a platform in the second seco

"The Bishop of London says: 'God can only get out each age the morality of which the age is capable, spee seems a plain hint to the Almighty that he must not too much, even from the Bishop of London."-London we

"Dagonet," in the Referee, is not so sceptical as be years ago, but now and again he lets himself go. Ger forceful remark worth quoting: "To meet the frightfulness with the beautiful sontiments of the Serue the Mount is only to invite the same result that would state the Mount is only to invite the same result that would step the efforts of a Sunday school to clear the jungle of beasts by singing Dr. Watts's hymns to them.

"Dear Christ, who reign'st above the flood Of human tears and human blood, A weary road these men have trod, O house them in the home of God."

O house them in the home of God., The last line is a gem ! It sounds like a prayer for the be killed as quickly as possible, and is one that most details would heartily endorse.

The glorious free press of England is still occupied by The glorious free press of England is still occupier in spreading the information that the Germans are at One of the six daily papers, each with the largent st tion, recently stated that "Since her [Germany] and philosophers foisted upon Darwin their theory struggle for existence, and half convinced the world truth, they have repudiated Christianity and made chief end and cause of the State." We hope the Christians were pleased with this farrage of non-

"P lorm 61

11 2

1915

/ in si

This Filth

ad at 1 al will mg also on all bat the n slore Down Core.

10 thu

Bishy

M St F. War. Mar. Dr.

nerse be equi

Con-niz to the nords to for in own to rorld usress ced to 5 82

S USE TODAL

which is a state

34.

II II

出版加加加加加加加

NOTICE.

The business of the

"FREETHINKER" and of THE PIONEER PRESS, formerly of 2 Newcastle-st., has been transferred to <sup>61</sup> FARRINGDON STREET, LONDON, E.C.

To Correspondents.

Ety (6. Africa), 108. 6d.; E. Lechmere, 103.; Anno Domini, Theodore Schroeder, £1.

Theodore Schroeder, £1. Theodore Schroeder, £1. Theodore Schroeder, £1. This: "I am glad to see by your letter that you are making the a rapid recovery, and the full-page 'Personal' in this s Freethinker is further evidence." B. Thanks. No room for it in this week's issue, but will ad space in our payt that space in our next. Howers, Shirth. —Sorry that the length of your letter quite there a given passage from a speech is beautiful or not, is ittely a question of taste, and the opinion has no necessary more to its value as an essay in formal logic. Nor is graveside a place where one ought to expect the reading the nessy of that character. (hus paper. Mr. Cohen greatly appreciates all you say, but and appreciate is nothing in the Education Act which the second

The send of the "Conscience Clause." (3) As an alternative you will see, Mr. Cohen the there is not all the second of the second second seco and dard fired by the Code. As you will see, Mr. Cohen has written a second intention of reprinting either of them. Of course, their intention of reprinting either of them. Of course, their intention in pamphlet form might do good, but there are science in the way.

Regarding in pamphlet form might up gotting Bengraphical accident; and Freethought is, we hope, "the is such boundaries. Whether on this side the Atlantic ud in the, the enemy is the same and the fight is the same, "the condict we welcome appreciation and help from any parter.

London, E.C.

London, E.O. Is MATORAL SECULAR SOCIETY'S office is at 62 Farringdon-street, London, E.O. London, E.O. London, E.O. Is a Matoral Secular Society in connection with services of the National Secular Society in connections and be addressed to the secretary, Miss E. M. Vance, giving the second second second second ary, Miss E. M. Vance, giving the second seco Faringdon-street, London, E.C.

Faringdon-street, London, E.C. by and Post Tuesday, or they will not be inserted. by and who send us newspapers would enhance the favor by to call attention.

The post Tuesday, or they will not be inserted. Tuesday, or they will not be inserted. Tuesday, or they will not be inserted. The passages to which they wish us to call attention. The passages to which they wish us to call attention. The passages to which they wish us to call attention. The passages to which they wish us to call attention. The passages to which they wish us to call attention. The passages to which they wish us to call attention. The passages to which they wish us to call attention. The passages to which they wish us to call attention. The passages to which they wish us to call attention. The passages to which they wish us to call attention. The passages to which they wish us to call attention. The passages to which they wish us to call attention.

Persona. Mag BARHIET LAW merits the attention she has whiters in the Freethinker. I knew her very well in the way days of my own Freethought advocacy. the early days of my own Freethought advocacy. tind a builty and had a nowerful common-sense tind of eloquence which share particularly in public tind of learning myself on the same plat-<sup>and</sup>, I had the pleasure of hearing her often in <sup>and</sup>on, and of lecturing myself on the same plat-leometimes visited the family at a turning a long way down the Camberwell-road, London. The name of the turning, which I have forgotten, and have no time to hunt up, is of no importance. They were very agreeable company, and I remember Mr. Law as a man who appeared rather soft, but was nothing of the kind. He was remarkably sharp in buying property and keeping it afterwards, especially from the perfectly honest depredations of his wife, who was somehow under the delusion that, besides being a good lecturer, she was also a good woman of business.

She made a great mess of the Secular Chronicle, which I believe she bought of Mr. Reddalls, and afterwards almost gave away. I had written for the paper myself under Reddall's management, but as the Secularist, which Holycake and I started, was even ther talked about, I could not transfer my services to Mrs. Law. She conducted it for some time -I don't remember how long-after the death of Reddalls, whom I knew, and often saw at Birming-ham. His special qualification for running the paper was that he was a printer, and carried on a little publishing business. I helped to officiate at his funeral. I remember that Francis Neale was one of the mourners, and he had contributed some fine articles to the paper. Reddalls had lectured during his later years against Spiritualism. The Davenport Brothers had stirred an immense interest in this question, and Reddalls went about imitating their spirit performances by natural means. He did all sorts of things fastened up in a cabinet. I remember his telling me how hard it was to master the art of clicking with the big toe. He died of consumption, a little younger than Jesus Christ. I do not regard him as a genius, but he had plenty of activity and ambition. I may add of Mrs. Law that she was very good at repartee. This was sometimes painfully learnt by the more insolent sort of Christian Evidence speakers who ventured to attack her on the public platform. Woe to those who had never crossed swords with her before. She came up smiling, and they must have felt that "one may smile and smile and be a villain." * *

Mr. Herbert Burrows thanks me for the "kindly notice" of him I wrote in the Freethinker lately, but did it contain as much kindness as truth? He rightly says that, although we differ in many things, he and I "have worked together for years in the greatest of all causes-freedom of thought and speech and the abolition of theological bigotry and superstition." He hopes that we shall so work to the end—sure that the victory will one day come. So do I. Mr. Barrows trasts my health is improving. I assure him it is. I have spent a lot of time doing this to all and sundry, but some people (I do not in-clude Mr. Burrows) will not believe it. I have always said I was getting better, and I say so now. How can I doubt it when I carry the evidence of it about with me? I am willing to convince doubters, at a shilling a head, from ten till four, the proceeds to go to the Freethinkers' Benevolent Fund.

I hope I shall live longer yet to deserve the sly compliment which Mr. Burrows fastens upon me. He looks for the recovery of my old (he calls it accustomed) "vigor of body, because the times are such that no brave man can be spared." Mr. Burrows closes his letter with a gallant reference to the breakfast he assisted at in my honor when I "came out of gaol." How long ago was that? We will not count the years.

I bade my friends to give no credit to the variety of accounts of my health which are being spread at all the points of the compass. What I say myself may be believed; what Mr. Cohen says, as interim editor of the Freethinker, may be believed. I do not say with the poet "the rest is lies"—"the rest is lies"—but I have no belief in them myself, and I advise all my friends-yes, and all my enemies -(heaven bless them !) to follow my example. Well then, I say that I am getting better, that I have made secret is it i the I trees, co the

10 11

treepi faish thre

Tere

a great improvement during the last week or so, and that I hope to visit London very shortly and see my new premises at 61 Farringdon-street. Everybody praises them, and my business manager, who has had everything to see to, including the fittings and decorations, thinks I am sure to do the same. This is not imagination, but fact—to quote from the great Goethe. Somebody said that I had been seen in London lately, but Mr. Ash may be sure, no doubt is sure, that I shall come to the new premises first.

I have paid everything connected with the new premises up to date, including the first quarter's rent, removing, fittings, and many other expenses. There is not a farthing of debt on any part of the enterprise, and I want to keep it going like that, but it will not be easy to do so considering the financial effect of this "war of wars," so I must once more ask my friends in particular, and my readers in general, to subscribe as promptly and as generously as possible to the President's Honorarium Fund. My last appeal produced a stir in what almost looked like dry bones, and I hope this one will have a still greater effect.

G. W. FOOTE.

Sugar Plums.

Most of our readers are aware-we repeat the information for the benefit of those who are not-that we are pleased to send copies of the Freethinker for six weeks, post free, to likely subscribers whose names and addresses are sent us. The advantage of this method may be seen from the following letter, which is only one of many :-

"I was extremely obliged for the six complimentary copies of the Freethinker, and think it is just fine. Before com-pleting the sixth free copy I had already ordered it from my stationers, and now receive a copy of the paper each week. It is hardly necessary to say that I am vastly inter-ested and very enthusiastic."

So long as the Freethinker is not displayed by newsagents in the same manner as other papers, this is the best method of gaining new subscribers, and it is a plan in which any of our readers may co-operate with the minimum of trouble. There is only one really satisfactory way of helping a paper like the Freethinker, and that is to secure new readers.

The Birmingham Branch is having its annual outing on Sunday, July 4, at Kinver, and the members will be pleased to come in touch with any friends in the district. Tea will be served at the Café Royal at 4 o'clock.

"The spirit of England is newly manifested in many directions in this time which is trying men's souls (to use Holmes's phrase)." So writes a Daily Telegraph reviewer. The mistake is almost an inexcusable one; for the expres-sion, as every decently read person knows, is Thomas Paine's. The correct rendering is, "These are the times that try men's souls," and they form the opening to Paine's article in the American Crisis which appeared in the Pennsylvania Journal in December, 1776. So famous a sentence from so famous an article by so great a man should be familiar to everyone who sets up as a literary critic. Why it is attri-buted to Holmes (what Holmes?) is a mystery. Perhaps the writer is ultra-religious, and thought it best not to use the name of so great a heretic as Paine.

Considered in the light of consequences, Paine's Crisis is one of the world's great historical productions. It was in-spired by the circumstances of the moment, and met them in a superb manner. The Army of Washington was dispirited, and in retreat. Washington at once recognised its power, and ordered it to be read to groups of the soldiers. The scathing contempt poured on "the summer soldier and the sunshine patriot," the fire of such sentences as "Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered," "The harder the conflict, the more glorious the triumph," did their work. Not only Washington, but every one of the leaders of the Revolution, recognised the power of Paine's work. The opening sentence, "These are the times that try men's souls," was taken as a watchword by the Army, and when in the last Crisis issued —the thirteenth—Paine wrote "The times that tried men's and in retreat. Washington at once recognised its power, the thirteenth-Paine wrote "The times that tried men's sculs are over," he could fairly claim to have played a great part in bringing about the result,

Science and the Bible.__V.

(Continued from p. 406.)

(Continued from p. 406.) "The hypothesis of special creation is not only a specious mask for our ignorance : its existence in is the history of every science but the history of the elimi-is the history of every science but the history of the elimi-tion of the notion of creative or other interference with matter of that science? When Astronomy was yong guided in their courses by celestial hands. Now the heir ourses by celestial hands. Now the planets are deducible from the laws of the forces which al-a schoolboy's stone to break a window.....Harmonious or and force inter-weaving by slow degrees, who at thread, that veil which lies between us and the inter-tion of the science draws of the world, and in ensu-nicture which science draws of the world, and in ensu-planets, Law Sermons (1874), p. 282. is a widely prevailing opinion that the geological to read the science draws of the science draws of the stark has resolved itself in the rest, so and the science draws of the world, and in ensu-planets which science draws of the world, and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the solved and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the solved and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the world, and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the solved and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the world and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the world and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the world and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the world and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the world and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the world and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the world and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the world and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the world and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the world and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the world and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the world and in ensu-tion of the science draws of the science draws of the world and in ensu-d and the science draws of the wor

IT is a widely prevailing opinion that the geological discoveries which so disconcerted the believers their divergence for the disconcerted the believers their divergence from the account related in Generic were the work of "infidel" scientists, who triani-antly produced them in a scientists, who helief antly produced them in order to overthrow belief the Bible. There is no form to overthrow for the There is no foundation in fact for the belief, but there is no foundation in fact for its science of geology was destification for its poly science of geology was denounced from the poli-all over the country, and geologists were described as "infidels" warring against God and the Bible. The fact is that the your sector be made the pr

The fact is that the very men who made the liter discoveries were themselves believers in the liter sense of the first chapters of the Bible, and we greatly surprised and disconcerted when they for that the geological means that the geological record could by no means made to agree with the did could by no Eible made to agree with the divine record if the Bible viet taken literally. Hugh Miller-who was describ-by Herbert Spencer as a "theologian stain geology"-himself says, in his Testimony of Rocks :--

He goes on to say that at that time his studies be been practically confirmed to his studies and been practically confined to the paleozoic at secondary rocks, but that during the last nine years after an examination of the paleozoic at after an examination of the later formations, he reluctantly forced to all reluctantly forced to abandon the idea that the of creation occupied only six days of twenty is

"The conclusion at which I have been comparing is that for arrive is, that for many long ages ere man was minto being, not a few of his humbler contemport the fields and wood the fields and woods enjoyed life in their products, and that for the anterior to haunts, and that for thousands of years anterior of their appearance, many of the existing nollies in care into being, and in which God when he had th Cur seas. That day during which the prosent error came into being, and in which God, when he heat ' the beast of the earth after his kind, and the after their kind,' at length terminated the work moulding a creature in His own image, brief per gave dominion over them all, was not a a few hours' duration, but extended over, may applied a few hours' duration, but extended over, may a lenniums of centuries.....and so I have been control to hold that the days of to hold that the days of creation were not netric prophetic days, and stretched far back into the bjs eternity" (Testimony of the Rocks, p. 10). arl Vogt, the ferrors of the stretched far back writing in 19<sup>50</sup>

Carl Vogt, the famous naturalist, writing in 150 observes :

"It is scarcely thirty years since Cavier said with the second part of we speak of fossil monkeys as of old acquaintaution trace back fossil man, not only to the diluviaution recent tertiary formations, though some obstinate controverted."* It was easy to believe in the account for Genesis before the geologists began to error * Carl Vort

* Carl Vogt, Lectures on Man (1864), P. 455.

JCLY 4, 1915 -

1915

-

Bord and a state of a logics ers in mpin in lief this or the pulped

10.

e ner literi

were foand as bi le vai oribei idying if this atura atura Statu

a bal

e mai

an

224

8

ジノ

tete of the fossil-bearing strata of the earth, just t is easy for a Salvationist now to believe in it, the Rich is absolutely ignorant on the subject. If the Bible said that all vegetation, including fruit tres, was created on the third day, fishes and birds the fifth day, and animals, including "cattle, and the fifth day, and animals, including "cattle, and treeping thing, and beast of the earth" (Gen. i. 24), althing with man, were created on the sixth day, there was nothing to contradict it. But things to contradict it. But things to continue the quotation from

"It is scarcely twenty years since I learned from Agassiz: Transition beds, palæozoic formation — Empire of Fishes; there are no reptiles in this period, nor could have spirted and there here contrary to the <sup>1</sup> reaces; there are no reptiles in this period, nor could have existed, as it would have been contrary to the plan of creation. Secondary formations (Trias, Jura, Chalk) = Empire of Reptiles; there are no mammals, nor could be first to reptile and an above. Tertiary arc could be, for the same reason as above. Tertiary ar could be, for the same reason as above. Letters, stata Empire of Mammals; there are no human beings nor could have been. Present creation Empire of Man. Where is at present this exclusive plan of creation? Reptiles in the Devonian strata, reptiles in cal. Forewall these Empire of Fishes! Mammals in Coal. Farewell, then, Empire of Fishes! Mammals in the Jarassic formation, mammals in the Parbeck limestone, which some consider as belonging to the lowest chalk. Adieu, then, Empire of Reptiles! Man in the apper tertiary strata, man in the diluvium. Good-bye, impire of Mammals!" (pp. 455.6).

As professor Huxley pointed out, although "it is threads by stated that aquatic animals took their threads and the fifth day, and not before," yet "there are any of aquatic animals are absent. The oldest balls of the Silveign rocks are exuite of marine the Silurian rocks are exuvite of marine e Bible,-Again, he further observes, to agree with "the order in which animals should have made their ppearance in the statistical world be this: Fishes, <sup>the</sup> order in which animals should have made then appearance in the stratified rocks would be this: Fishes, including the great whales and birds; after them all including the great whales and birds; after them all bound be further from the facts as we find them; we know of not the elightest evidence of the existence of how of not the slightest evidence of the existence of the slightest evidence of the slightest formathe before the Jurassic, or perhaps the Triassic, formain the Carboniferous rocks."

in the Carboniferous rocks." The existence of birds in the Carboniferous, the states, and the Silurian rocks. I need hardly say this is not the case, and that not a trace of the far later period the is not the case, and that not a trace of the indemnession of the case and that not a trace of the indemnession of the inde Apart Aparts and a second seco Action I have mentioned."* Action of the second state of the second s the swiss parsonage in which he was born, i the standard is big life. Professor Tyndall relates meeting with the Trates of Mr. Winthrop's <sup>118</sup> life. Professor Tyndall relates meeting with and in the United States, at Mr. Winthrop's <sup>100</sup> lifey halted in front of a window. <sup>11</sup> Earnestland and said to Barnestly, almost sadly, Agassiz turned and said to Barnestly, almost sadly, Agassiz turned and said to the centlemen standing round, 'I confess that I was by the best intellects of our time. Its success is greater and could have thought possible.'"‡

"This the the new facts. He confesses :-"This theory, as then advanced, certainly found me violent and sincere opponent; but as it is now pro-ter than any other theory, a clue to the affinity of advanced types, and it seems in every respect a step opposed towards the knowledge of the truth. When types, I he doctrine of the gradual transformation of advance towards the knowledge of the truth. When opposed the doctrine of the gradual transformation of stations was certainly much prejudiced by received antific researches."

P to this time—or, to be quite accurate, four the charge earlier, Vogt's work being published here in the that in opposing the advance of the new (1902), pp. 19-20. H.H. Huxley, Lectures and Essays (1902), pp. 19-20. Charly of Science, vol. i., p. 68. Charly ogt, Lectures of Science (1876), p. 514.

scientific facts and ideas. But the wiser and more knowing ones, who knew the strength of the enemy, saw that ultimately this stubborn attitude would end in disaster. Besides, they had the example of the Catholic Church in its campaign against the movement of the earth ; and they concluded that it would be better to capitulate to the inevitable, and make the best terms possible in the circumstances. This was the origin of the famous Essays and Reviews. The idea was to surrender what Mr. Gladstone later on called the "Impregnable Rock of Holy Scripture," and concentrate their forces in defence of the idea of God and a future life, which most people believed in on the authority of the Bible. The result was the appearance in 1860 of the famous volume of Essays and Reviews, which consisted of seven essays, six of them by the most learned elergymen in the Church, namely, Dr. Temple, Rev. Rowland Williams, Professor Baden Powell, the Rev. H. B. Wilson, Rev. Mark Pattison, and the Rev. Professor Jowett. Only one contributor was not in Holy Orders; this was C. W. Goodwin, who contri-buted an article on the "Mosaic Cosmogony," which more immediately concerns our subject, although it was not more drastic than Rowland Williams' review of Bunsen's Biblical Researches or Baden Powell's "Study of the Evidences of Christianity," which was denounced as thoroughly atheistic.

Goodwin sets out to show the atter impossibility of attempting to reconcile the account given in Genesis with the facts and investigations of modern science. He observes, "in a text-book of theological instruction widely used, we find it stated in broad terms, 'Geological investigation, it is now known, all prove the perfect harmony between scripture and geology, in reference to the history of creation'" (Horne's Introduction to the Holy Scriptures, 1856). It is this view that Goodwin sets out to destroy. He observes that "light and the measurement of time are represented as existing before the manifestation of the sun," and notices that "The work of the second day of creation is to crect the vault of Heaven, which is represented at supporting an ocean of water above it.....It is said to have pillars, foundations, doors, and windows" (p. 219). After going through the six days of creation, he observes that there can be little doubt as to the literal meaning of the writer, and it is beyond dis-pute that for centuries "its words have been received in their genuine and natural meaning. That this meaning is prima facie one wholly adverse to the present astronomical and geological views of the universe is evident enough " (p. 223). But the most damaging part of the essay was the revelation that not only did the geological record flatly contradict the Bible record, but that the reconcilers of the Bible and science were in violent contradiction among themselves. Having agreed to abandon the obvious meaning of the text, they immediately began to quarrel as to what the meaning was. In fact, the reconcilers required a super-reconciler to reconcile them.

Dr. Buckland, for instance, in his "Bridgewater reatise," felt at liberty to introduce millions of Treatise," millions of years between the beginning in which God created the heaven and the earth, and the evening or commencement of the first day. Goodwin shows how Hugh Miller-who had adopted Buck-land's suggestion-was obliged, after further inves-tigation, to give it up. "Other geologists," says Goodwin, "have proposed to give an entirely mythical or enigmatical sense to the Mosaic narrative, and to consider the creative days 'described as vast periods of time" (p. 236); this in turn being rejected by Archdeacon Pratt in his Science and Scripture not at Variance.

W. MANN. (To be continued.)

The dear Daily News recently quoted the words of an artillery colonel" with regard to the Allies offensive : "The day will come when we shall shake heaven and earth with a stupendous rain of explosives." Feathers should be cheap on the day when heaven is shaken.

Famous Freethinkers I Have Known.-VI.

MRS. ANNIE BESANT.

FREETHOUGHT recognises no distinction in sex, color, or race in its advocates or adherents. From time immemorial there have been Freethinkers, male and female, who have devoted their lives to the service of the cause. The fair, wise, and beautiful philosopher Hypatia, consecrated her life to the service of Freethought. France has produced many lady advocates of Freethought, and so also has America. In this country the most famous I remember were Mrs. Annie Besant and Mrs. Harriet Law.

In a previous article I have recorded my recollections of Mrs. Harriet Law, in this one I propose to give some reminiscences of Mrs. Besant as I knew her when she was unquestionably the most learned, the most eloquent, and the most powerful lady advocate of Freethought that this country ever produced.

From J. M. Wheeler's splendid Biographical Dictionary of Freethinkers, I learn that Mrs. Besant was born on October 1, 1847. Educated in Evangelicalism by Miss Marryat, sister of the famous Captain Marryat, the novelist, she shortly afterwards turned towards the High Church by reading Pusey and others. A diligent study of the Gospels led her to recognise that they contained a number of very glaring contradictions, but she set her doubts at rest for a time by regarding her scepticism as a sin too wicked to entertain.

In 1867 she married the Rev. Frank Besant, a clergyman of the Church of England and brother of Sir Walter Besant, the famous novelist. Soon afterwards she read extensively the controversial literatare on religion and science. A study of Greg's Creed of Christendom and Matthew Arnold's Literature and Dogma did much to increase and deepen her scepticism. She subsequently became acquainted with the Rev. Charles Voysey and Mr. Thomas Scott, the publisher, for the latter of whom she wrote an essay on "The Deity of Jesus of Nazareth," "by the wife of a benificed clergyman." This led her husband to insist upon her taking the Communion or leaving. She chose the latter course, taking, by agreement, her daughter with her. When thrown upon her own resources, she at first wrote several tracts for Mr. Scott, but she altimately threw the weight of her brilliant intellect and extraordinary talents into the Freethought cause.

In 1874 she succeeded James Thomson (B.V.) on the staff of the National Reformer and wrote a weekly article over the signature of "Ajax." The following year she took to the platform, and being naturally very eloquent, she soon won for herself a place as the leading lady advocate in the Freethought movement.

In 1880 Mrs. Besant matriculated at the London University, and in 1882 she took 1st. B.Sc. with honors. A lady with such extraordinary talent was bound to make a name for herself in any movement. I had the pleasure of hearing her first lecture delivered as a kind of introduction to the great Radical Party of this country, at the Co-Operative Society's Hall, Castle-street, upon "The Political Status of Women." Mr. George Jacob Holyoake presided and Mr. Bradlaugh had a seat on the platform. Mrs. Bradlaugh Bonner, in her admirable life of her father, tells us that Mr. Bradlaugh was so impressed by Mrs. Besant's eloquence on that occa-sion that he considered it "as probably the best speech by a woman" he had ever listened to.

I heard her frequently. Naturally she was very fluent of speech, with a wonderful vocabulary of words, at once expressive and eloquent. She had a pleasant, cultured voice, a most earnest style of delivery, and a well-trained logical order of mind, reasoning, her fascinating style, and the great en-thusiasm with which she grappled with her subject. Her linguistic knowledge was simply marvellous. I for Mr. F. J. Gould, a schoolmaster and remember attending the International Freetboor Congress in 1876 at the Hall of Science. Saturday evening Mr. Bradlaugh was in the chil and, just before the rising of the meeting Inst continue the discussion on "Secularism, Positive and Spiritualism," when he told me that I shows have the first place in the rold me that I shows the fuller have the first place in the discussion on the falle ing Sanday morning at 10.30. I knew that important to be there in good time, because I learned from experience that if I was not present the moment he took the chair he would call someone else to recover the chair he would call someone else to resume the discussion. So I hours home, wrote out my speech on the subject, and the time came I the time came I mounted the platform and deliver, it to the best of my ability, occupying eracting quarter of an hour in delivery. Professor La Buchner, the distinguish of the professor la Buchner, the distinguished German actentist at philosopher was in the philosopher was in the chair. Immediately and wards, Mrs. Besant rose and translated my spinto Franch into French-for the benefit of the French delay -occupying about the same time as I had take read my paper. Then she translated a Datch spe into English, and delivered a part of her own ep in German for the benefit of the distinguished Her most notable efforts at oratory, hove were no doubt when she spoke for two days on social aspect of the Malthusian doctrine before Chief Justice Cockburn in the trial of the Que Bradlaugh and Besant, and later when she appear against the decision of the Master of the Rolls the question of domining the master of the she the question of depriving her of the custody of the daughter on account of the custody of the cu daughter on account of her heretical opinions. each of these occasions she showed herself to be perfect mistress of all the perfect mistress of all the arts of oratory, argument persuasion, wit, eloquence, and logical force. On one occasion I had a chat with a theatran manager-Mr. Joseph Arnold Cave-alter here Mrs. Besant speak, and he said to me. "My and Mrs. Besant speak, and he said to me, "My Sir, if I could only get Mrs. Besant as the least lady at my theatre I could make a fortune. Sir, she would thrill the audience, and in a week theatre would be all too small for me." As a man of fact, Mrs. Besant's power of the theatre an audience and the state of the theatre and the state of the theatre and the state of the theatre and the state of the st of fact, Mrs. Besant's power of attracting an audie was almost could to that was almost equal to that of Mr. Bradlaugh hims Mrs. Besant was very not of Mr. Bradlaugh north Mrs. Besant was very proud of her power of more an audience. At one of do her power of conference an audience. At one of the N.S.S. Conferen-held at Birmingham in the N.S.S. S. conference held at Birmingham in the 'eighties, the speake Wete the evening meeting at the Town Hall wete Besant, Mr. Bradlangh Mr. The Slater and Besant, Mr. Bradlaugh, Mr. Thomas Slater, and G. W. Foote. All the speed of the strength of the speed of the All the speeches were extremely e quent, but I think I can say without the align intention of flattery, that the finest speech delive that evening, both for the matter and the master way in which he handled the applied was way in which he handled the subject. The for the polished, literary form of this yournal. polished, literary form of the speech, the speech or the speech or the speech or the speech or the magnificent percention of the speech to wat the magnificent percention. power of exposition, the great flights of oratorial the magnificent peroration, combined to make speech a perfect masterpiece. Mr. Bradlaugh self seemed very much impressed by it; but the have said, all the speeches were so brilliant it was very difficult to indee between them. It was very difficult to judge between them. Mrs. Besant got off the platform, she came steel to me and asked what I thought of her probably thinking I was a pretty goad judge beam form eloquence. I replied in one word, and she seemed to be pleased with my single and appreciation, which I gave with frank and sincerity. it was very difficult to judge between them. Mrs. Besant not off the

In 1888 Mrs. Besant was returned as a Merri the London School Board for the Tower To Division. Shortly officer of Division. Shortly afterwards, I, as an officer of Board, came in conflict with a muloyers, and Board, came in conflict with my employment prohibited from delivering Freethought is an Sanday or selling any of my pamphlets or mu-tions on that day. Mrs. Besant, in Freethough speech, defended my right to lecture on the speech, defended my right to lecture on Freed on Sondays, upon which do not not in the on Sondays, upon which day I was not in the resolution of the Board; and so and so the resolution of the Board and the solution of the solution of the Board and the solution of the Board and the solution of the sol of the Board; and, as a result, the resolution resolution of the splendid fight she made allow

TITATIANTASTO · LARSON BUTTATONTO

1815

hongti On the chair

rose tivis

she itra Ibi

sent s

ll op hone d whe

liver

Both

st and special specia

on the last of here is a second secon to bi ume.

satrin pearing y des leading Way

eek =! matter dien

insi novic renci

e Mond M

ly bis of the second se

Dun Dans

bool Board, who was grossly persecuted on account this heretical opinions.

When Mrs. Besant became a Socialist, her personal and the second as ber great argumentative power the many Freethinkers with her out of our moveand many Freethinkers with her out of our move-tent into the Socialist ranks, which regarded social more importance than purely specula-questions on religion. When she debated with the Foote at the Hall of Science on "Is Socialism and " I had the hereer of presiding one evening Number at the Hall of Science on the Second and a second index " I had the honor of presiding one of this index thing the debate. And a very extraordinary thing appended. During the debate, the reporter who had n engaged to take verbatim notes, suddenly came the faint, and was unable to proceed with his work. bis occurred while Mrs. Besant was speaking. I to call her attention to the fact, but failed, and the rose to deliver her final speech she charged the rose to deliver her final speech and charges with being unfair, and not allowing her an equal isomet of time with her opponent. Now, anybody to knows me knows that I would not be guilty of any an injustice to the part of the specially to a an injustice to any man, more especially to a dy. I was willing that Mrs. Besant should take as the time of the theorem the necessary in her last I was willing that Mrs. Besant should take as the time as she thought necessary in her last somed her seat, and I felt sorry that I had not billy mentioned the incident, which only a few of the pletform had abcorved. the platform had observed.

Ibope Mrs. Besant forgave me, for I had no inten-tof doing her an injustice. Mrs. Besant remained the Freethought Party until she publicly pro-toged herself to be a Wheesenbist, and then she the best of the set of the different conditions. But we as Freethinkers for us while grateful for the splendid work she for us while she was an advocate of our Cause; the won over to our movement hundreds of men and the Poison over to our movement hundreds of men and the of Wrs. Besant for having destroyed in them the Poison over to our movement hundreds of men and the Poison over to our movement hundreds of men and the Poison over to our movement hundreds of men and the Poison over to our movement hundreds of men and the Poison over to our movement hundreds of men and the Poison over to our movement hundreds of men and the Poison over to our movement hundreds of men and the Poison over to our movement hundreds of men and the Poison over to our movement hundreds of men and the Poison over to our movement hundreds of men and the Poison over to our movement hundreds of men and the Poison over to our movement hundreds of men and the Poison over to our movement hundreds of men and the Poison over to our movement hundreds of men and the Poison over to our movement hundreds of the Poison over the Po the poisonous germs of an insidious superstition, and to tread the narrow path that leads to happiness, and progress. ARTHUR B. MOSS.

Deus Loquitur.

Taxes of the second state <sup>a of</sup> as I viewed their insubstantial forms, <sup>b</sup>ehold, a voice in sombre brooding tones I <sup>T</sup>was he, the foremost, lord of heaven, that spake <sup>t</sup> us<sub>0</sub> his compeer, Lucifer the fell.

Oft have I thought, O Lucifer ! since we, Along with our creator Man, began Evolving into consciousness of self; Energing from our first orude ignorance Evolving into consciousness of self; Interesting from our first crude ignorance What a most mysifying paradox What a most mysifying paradox What which is, and that which makes it be! Throughout Eternity's unceasing change? Is which he moves a moment that scarce counts Of vortices of change unlimited? The phantoms of his own phantasmal mind; Brought is existence in the flux of things; Status the side of his own vague dreams. Not set and the flux of things; Status and him the side of him Tought to existence in the flux of things; is inclustantial as his own vague dreams. Added and the strange attributes of power ownipstent unchangeability! Wondroug facination of mere sound!) by making him, in mine own image true; With will as free as o'er he deemed mine own With tragedy for his own happiness!

For though Man made us twain, he deems that I Am cause alone of all that e'er could be, And sway alike his greatest weal or woe Yet his own priests, the midwives of our birth, Now tell him 'E'en Gods powers are limited; His will can only act when not opposed'; Vainly I try to understand the minds Of those who vow I have created them; They chant that I 'rule everything that is' Yet me, through their free will, they can defy, And let you sway them wheresoe'er you will ; Nature, they sing, makes manifest my will According to the laws that I have framed; Yet they ne'er blame me for her vagaries Yet they ne'er blame me for her vagaries That often wreck their aims and dearest hopes; Tho' you, O Lucifer ! they often blame, Although they say that I have conquered hell; They say my highest attribute is Love; Yet priests call bloody war 'A Day of God !' And eager urge them bend their highest powers To blast themselves were then their drambar To blast themselves worse than their dreamborn hell; Each ever claims that I fight on their side; Each swears that yours is their opponent's cause ; Perceiving not how they themselves delude. They vow that I have power o'er every heart; Yet never marvel that I do not change Their tyrants selfish hearts from lust of power That wreaks on them black miseries untold; But watch aloft in dumb indifference, Doing, as I have ever done, no-thing. One could extend a catalogue like this, But that it bores worse than divinity. Truly, whatever sense they reft themselves With which, as added grace, me to endow, Their minds they must have shed of every scrap Of humor."

Then sounded mocking laughter That thrilled with sneer of cynical disdain; Silence ensued; there came a mighty gust, As though all space had heaved a weary yawn ; And lo I the bard awoke to things of earth.

W. J. KING.

National Secular Society.

REPORT OF MONTHLY EXECUTIVE MEETING HELD ON JUNE 24.

Present : Messrs. Bowman, Britten, Cohen, Cunningham, Davidson, Gorniot, Heaford, Jackson, Judge, Leat, Neate, Nichols, Quinton, Roger, Rosetti, Samuels, Shore, Silverstein, Thurlow, Wood, White, Miss Kough and Mrs. Roleffs.

In the absence of the President, Mr. Cohen was elected to the chair.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year General Secretary, Miss E. M. Vance; Benevolent Fund Committee, Messrs. Davey, Leat, Roger, Samuels, and Wood; Monthly Auditors, Messrs. Leat and Samuels. New members were admitted for the Parent Society and the Camberwell and West Ham Branches.

Instructions were given for open air Demonstrations to be held at Brockwell Park and Edmonton Green.

Notices of Motion, Nos. 9, 10, 12, and 13, remitted from the Conference Agenda, were dealt with, and Messrs. David-son, Rosetti, and Shore were elected as a sub-committee to carry out Resolutions 10 and 13 (incorporated).

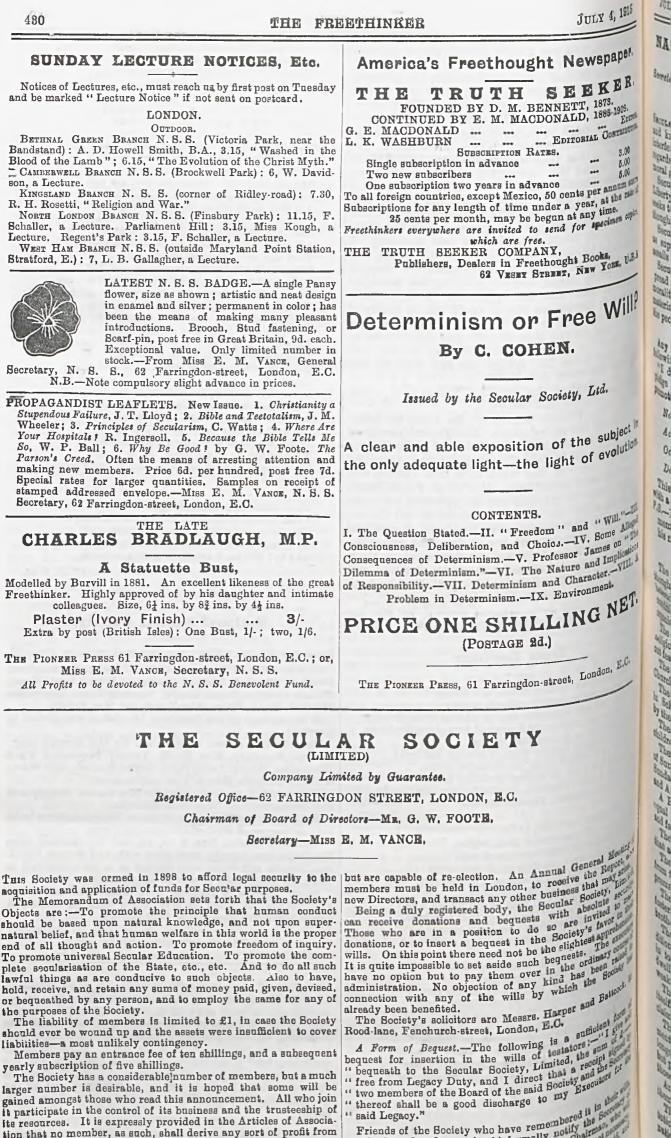

Minor matters of business were dealt with, and it was resolved that, in order to give longer time for discussion, future Executive meetings be held at 7 p m.

E. M. VANCE, Secretary.

The official news of the War published in the newspapers has the same air of sober restraint manifested in the Go spe narratives. A good story of the effect of such reading is told by the Manchester Guardian. Two workmen were told by the Manchester Guardian. Two workmen were discussing the War, and one remarked it would be a long job. "It will an' all," replied his mate. "The Germans are taking tons of thousands of Russian prisoners, and the Russians are taking tens of thousands of German prisoners. Presently all the Russians will be in Germany and all the Germans in Russia, and then they'll have to fight to get home.'

"Woman," says Miss Marie Corelli, "was not created by a Divine Intelligence to be a toy or a domestic drudge, but a comrade." What a pity the Divine Intelligence made so few hits and so many misses.

lot

THIS Society was ormed in 1898 to afford legal security to the acquisition and application of funds for Secutar purposes.
The Memorandum of Association sets forth that the Society's Objects are:—To promote the principle that human conduct should be based upon natural knowledge, and not upon superentatural belief, and that human welfare in this world is the proper end of all thought and action. To promote freedom of inquiry. To promote universal Secular Education. To promote the complete asoularisation of the State, etc., etc. And to do all such lawful things as are conducive to such objects. Also to have, hold, receive, and retain any sums of money paid, given, devised, or bequeathed by any person, and to employ the same for any of the such state. The liability of members is limited to £1, in case the Society's solicitors are Messers. Harper and Batter is the such as the such besented. This Society was ormed in 1898 to afford legal security to the acquisition and application of funds for Secutar purposes. The Memorandum of Association sets forth that the Society's Objects are:—To promote the principle that human conduct should be based upon natural knowledge, and not upon super-natural belief, and that human welfare in this world is the proper end of all thought and action. To promote freedom of inquiry. To promote universal Secular Education. To promote the com-plete socularisation of the State, etc., And to do all such lawful things as are conducive to such objects. Also to have, lawful things as are conducive to such objects. To promote universal Secular Education. To promote the com-plete secularisation of the State, etc., etc. And to do all such lawful things as are conducive to such objects. Also to have, hold, receive, and retain any sums of money paid, given, devised, or bequeathed by any person, and to employ the same for any of the purposes of the Society. The liability of members is limited to £1, in case the Society should ever be wound up and the assets were insufficient to cover liabilities—a most unlikely contingency. Members pay an entrance fee of ten shillings, and a subsequent vearly subscription of five shillings.

Members pay an entrance fee of ten shillings, and a subsequent yearly subscription of five shillings. The Society has a considerable number of members, but a much larger number is desirable, and it is hoped that some will be gained amongst those who read this announcement. All who join it participate in the control of its business and the trusteeship of its resources. It is expressly provided in the Articles of Associa-tion that no member, as such, shall derive any sort of profit from the Society, either by way of dividend, bonus, or interest, or in any way whatever. The Society's affairs are managed by an elected Board of Directors, consisting of not less than five ard not more than twelve members, one-third of whom retire (by ballot) each year, ready been benefited. The Society's solicitors are Messrs. Harper and Baikov.

A Form of Bequest.—The following is a sufficient since bequest for insertion in the wills of testates and the "bequeath to the Secular Society, Limited, the oph "free from Legacy Duty, and I direct that a receipt two members of the Board of the said Society and the said Legacy." Friends of the T per.

430

1915

1

R

Bont

3.00 3.00 5.00 5.00 e cale - n st

U.E.S

/11 ect in ution

.''-III

Allest

licasic VIII. J

ET.

E.C.

The state

01

NATIONAL SECULAR SOCIETY. President: G. W. FOOTE.

furthary : MISS E. M. VANCE, 62 Farringdon-st., London, E.C.

Principles and Objects.

Principles dill oujcous. Intransm teaches that conduct should be base on reason is howledge. It knows nothing of divine guidance or reference; it excludes supernatural hopes and fears; it is a happiness as man's proper aim, and utility as his inliguide.

bety, which is at once a right and a duty; and therefore to remove every barrier to the fullest equal freedom of angot, action, and speech.

Scularism declares that theology is condemned by reason superstitious, and by experience as mischievous, and tails it as the historic enemy of Progress. Scularism accordingly seeks to dispel superstition; to additive to disestablish religion; to rationalise ratify; to promote peace; to dignify labor; to extend to energy; and to realise the self-government of prople.

Pooting its objects."

Name..... Adaress ...... Occupation

his Declaration should be transmitted to the Secretary a subscription.

Beyond a minimum of Two Shillings per year, every the means and interest in the cause

Immediate Practical Objects.

The Legitimation of Bequests to Secular or other Free-sht Societies, for the maintenance and propagation of dox opinions on matters of religion, on the same dox opinions on matters of religion, on the same

Abolition of the Blasphemy Laws, in order that abolition of the Blasphemy Laws, in order that the canvassed as freely as other subjects, with-The Disestablishment and Disendowment of the State The Disestablishment and Disendowment of the State

The Abolition of all Religious Teaching and Bible Reading Schools, or other educational establishments supported The State. Tibe State. The Opening of all endowed educational institutions to the digen and worth of all elector alike.

The Opening of all endowed educational institutes The Opening of all endowed educational institutes The Abrogation of all classes alike. "Isoday for the purpose of culture and recreation ; and the state of State and Municipal Museums, Libraries, A Reform of the Marriage Laws, ospecially to secure tailed in the form of the Marriage Laws, ospecially to secure tailed in the form of the Marriage Laws, ospecially to secure tailed in the form of the Marriage Laws, ospecially to secure tailed in the form of the Marriage Laws, ospecially to secure the provide the marriage Laws of the marriage Laws of the mark of the marriage Laws of the mark of

The Brotection of the legal status of men and women, so the Protection of the legal status of men and women, so the Protection of the legal status of sexual distinctions. The Protection of children from all forms of violence, and the greed of these would make a profit out of their the greed of those who would make a profit out of their abolition.

Abolition of all hereditary distinctions and privileges, the Abolition of all hereditary distinctions and privileges, there a spirit antagonistic to justice and human

The function of the right and the deterioration of family life.

To begai protection in which combinations.

the provided for its moral and economical advancement, have The legal protection in such combinations. The Substitution of the idea of Reform for that of Punish-isses the treatment of criminals, so that gaols may no advance of physical, intellectual, and moral elevation for the moral listed with anti-social tondencies. The many treatment and legal protection against cruelty. The many treatment and legal protection against cruelty.

The Promotion of the moral law to animals, so as to secure the promotion of the moral law to animals, so as to secure the promotion of Ponce between nations, and the substi-tion of Arbitration for War in the settlement of inter-

FREETHOUGHT PUBLICATIONS.

LIBERTY AND NECESSITY. An argument against Free Will and in favor of Moral Causation. By David Hume. 32 pages, price 2d., postage 1d.

THE MORTALITY OF THE SOUL. By David Hume. With an Introduction by G. W. Foote. 16 pages, price 1d., postage 1d.

AN ESSAY ON SUICIDE. By David Hume. With an Historical and Critical Introduction by G. W. Foote. price 1d., postage 1d.

FROM CHRISTIAN PULPIT TO SECULAR PLATFORM. By J. T. Lloyd. A History of his Mental Development. 60 pages, price 1d., postage 1d.

THE MARTYRDOM OF HYPATIA. By M. M. Mangasarian (Chicago). 16 pages, price 1d., postage 1d.

- THE WISDOM OF THE ANCIENTS. By Lord Bacon. A beautiful and suggestive composition. 86 pages, reduced from 1s. to 3d., postage 1d.
- REFUTATION OF DEISM. By Percy Bysshe Shelley. With an Introduction by G. W. Foote. 32 pages, price 1d., postage <sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>d.

LIFE, DEATH, AND IMMORTALITY. By Percy Bysshe Shelley. 16 pages, price 1d., postage 1d.

WHY AM I AN AGNOSTIC? By Col. R. G. Ingersoll. 24 pages, price 1d., postage 1d.

BIBLE STUDIES AND PHALLIC WORSHIP. By J. M. Wheeler. 186 pages, price 1s. 6d., postage 2d.

UTILITARIANISM. By Jeremy Bentham. An Important Work. 32 pages, price 1d., postage 1d.

- THE MISTAKES OF MOSES. By Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Only Complete Edition. Beautifully printed on fine paper. 136 pages. Reduced to 6d., postage 2<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>d.
- THE ESSENCE OF RELIGION. By Ludwig Fenerbach. "All theology is anthropology." Büchner said that "no one has demonstrated and explained the purely human origin of the idea of God better than Ludwig Feuerbach." 78 pages, price 6d, postage 1d.

THE CODE OF NATURE. By Denis Diderot. Power-ful and eloquent. 16 pages, price 1d., postage <sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>d.

BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY OF FREETHINKERS-Of All Ages and Nations. By Joseph Mazzini Wheeler, 355 pages, price (reduced from 7s. 6d.) 3s., postage 4d.

- ▲ PHILOSOPHICAL INQUIRY CONCEBNING HUMAN LIBERTY. By Anthony Collins. With Preface and Anno-tations by G. W. Footo and Biographical Introduction by J. M. Wheeler. One of the strongest defences of Deter-minism ever written. Cloth, 1s.; paper, 6d., post 1d.
- DEFENCE OF FREETHOUGHT. By Col. R. G. Ingersoll. 64 pages, price 2d., postage 1d.

ROME OR REASON? A Reply to Cardinal Manning. By Col. R. G. Inge: soll. 48 pages, price 1d., postage 1d.

An Oration by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. THE GODS. 48 pages, price 2d., postage 1d.

DO I BLASPHEME? An Oration by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. 32 pages, price 1d., postage 1d.

PAMPHLETS BY C. COHEN.

AN OUTLINE OF EVOLUTIONABY ETHICS. Price 6d., postage 1d.

SOCIALISM, ATHEISM, AND CHRISTIANITY. Price 1d., postage 1d.

CHRISTIANITY AND SOCIAL ETHICS. Price 1d., postago 1d.

PAIN AND PROVIDENCE. Price 1d., postage 1d.

THE PIONEER PRESS, 61 Farringdon-street, London, E.C. THE FREETHINKEB

JULY 4, 1915

1 10

11

If non here

BE

ayth A very site and a sensitive sen

FLOWERS OF FREETHOUGHT. By G. W. FOOTE.

FIRST SERIES.

Fifty-One Articles and Essays on a Variety of Freethought Topics. 302 pp., Cloth, 2s. 6d., postage 3d.

SECOND SERIES.

Fifty-Eight Essays and Articles on a further variety of Freethought topics 302 pp., Cloth, 2s. 6d., postage 3d.

These two volumes contain much of the Author's best and raciest writings.

THE PIONEER PRESS, 61 FARRINGDON STREET, LONDON, E.C.

PIONEER PAMPHLETS.

Now being issued by the Secular Society, Ltd.

No. I .- BIBLE AND BEER. By G. W. Foote.

FORTY PAGES-ONE PENNY.

Postage: single copy, 1d.; 6 copies, 11d.; 18 copies, 3d.; 26 copies 4d. (parcel post).

No. II.-DEITY AND DESIGN. By C. Cohen. (A Reply to Dr. Alfred Russel Wallace.)

THIRTY-TWO PAGES-ONE PENNY.

Postage: Single copy, 1d.; 6 copies, 11d.; 18 copies, 21d.; 26 copies, 4d. (parcel post).

No. III.-MISTAKES OF MOSES. By Colonel Ingersoll. THIRTY-TWO PAGES-ONE PENNY.

Postage: Single copy, 1d.; 6 copies, 11d.; 18 copies 21d.; 26 copies, 4d. (parcel post).

Special Terms for Quantities for Free Distribution or to Advanced Societies.

THE PIONEER PRESS, 61 FARRINGDON STREET, LONDON, E.O.

G. W. FOOTE and W. P. BALL.

Issued by the Secular Society, Ltd.

Paper, 6d., net. Cloth, 1s., net., postage 2d. THE PIONEER PRESS, 61 FARRINGDON STREET, LONDON, E.C.

Printed and Published by the PIONEER PRESS, 61 Farringdon-street, London. E.C.