

03

100 di.

M dif

THE

5.2

IS CI

16D

the ed?

IT IT

U

WEF

dill dur 花市

e Dic

di

12/23

yB

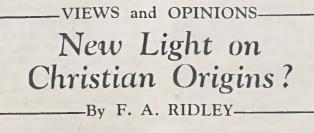

Founded 1881

Editor: F. A. RIDLEY

Price Fourpence

A FEW weeks back, we reprinted in The Freethinker one of the most curious and, perhaps, instructive passages in early Christ curious and, perhaps, instructive passages are early early Christian literature: the declaration by the early Church Forthan literature the declaration by the early fifty at Church Father. St. Irenæus, that Jesus was nearly fifty at the time the time when he preached his gospel. The author, Irename bid French industrial Irenaeus, Bishop of Lyons, to-day a big French industrial lown, then, presumably, a provincial town of the Roman Empire, was an early Church

Father who, or so ecclesiasleal tradition declares, was native of Greek-speaking Asia Minor, who, in or about 179, became Bishop of Lyons. The name, Irenæus, is Greek, and the works ascribed to him were, presumably originally written in Greek.

remembered that Greek was the "lingua Franca," the osmopolitan language of the Roman Empire at this time. Marcus Aurelius, under whom Irenzus lived, wrote his Tamous Aurelius, under whom Trenzus rived, Tamous Meditations, his private Diary, not intended for Publications, his private Diary, not intended for Publication, in Greek. The Christian Church in Rome also tontinued to use the Greek language in its ecclesiastical hurgy until a later date than that of Irenæus. The $(h_{ristian}^{*ey})$ until a later date than that or momentum of 0 of 0 or 0 o of oriental slaves.

What is most remarkable about our second century uthor's biographical information about the Jesus of the Gospel, biographical information about the system. $W_{hen tr}$ is the confidence with which it was expressed. when the Bishop of Lyons tells us that Jesus lived a life of honourable Bishop of Lyons tells us that Jesus lived a life of was honourable activity until he was nearly fifty and was hiversally respected by his contemporaries, he is not merely giving his own opinion, or asserting a doubtful addition. Contrarily, he asserts that what he is reporting about The Lord is the unanimous tradition of the Church of Asia of Asia-that is, Asia Minor as handed down directly from John the disciple of the Lord, the traditional Founder from John the disciple of the Lord, the traditional Founder that Church, who had lived " into the reign of Trajan "that is, into the second century of the Christian Era; since the Emperor Trajan, one of the most famous Roman Emperor Trajan, one of the most famous Roman Emperors reigned from 98-117 of our present Era. Not only does Irenaus tell us that his account of the life and activities Irenaus tell us that his account of the life and activities of Jesus is the correct one, but he explicitly asserts that the hat the story that Jesus only taught for one year after his Babtism story that Jesus only taught for one year after his aptism by John, and died at the age of thirty, or therethe Grant by John, and died at the age of the disculated by Gnostics, the arch-heretics of the period in which the histop of Lyons traditionally wrote.

In making such a statement, Irenæus, as the saying goes, Said a mouthful." For our Gospels, which, incidentally, renarces is the first recorded Christian author to quote as canonic is the first recorded Christian author variations only Canonical by name, all repeat, with minor variations only Gnostic "heresy" so roundly denounced by our author a contrary to the unanimous tradition of the apostles and the contrary to the unanimous tradition of the apostles and the Church. From which it would seem to follow that Gospels must have been compiled by Gnostic heretics in the succeeded in imposing, eventually, their point of view the the Church. One would like to know what, exactly, was the Four Gospels which the Bishop of Lyons had before him when he wrote his famous book Against the Heresies. from which our extract is taken, towards the end of the second century of our Era. It is worth recalling that the pagan critic of Christianity, Celsus, who seems to have writen his True Word, the oldest critique of Christianity to have survived, about the same time as Irenæus, already accuses the Christians of having "edited" and rewritten their "Sacred Books," "once, twice, many times."

Apparently, this process had not finished even then?

The statement of this early Church Father about Christian origins is so original and so destructive of the now universally accepted Gospel tradition that, though unsupported by any other surviving documents in early Christian literature, it appears to be worth further investigation.

Firstly, with regard to its author. At the time when Irenaus wrote the books ascribed to him, Christianity had not yet emerged from its subterranean existence as an obscure oriental cult. Its first authentic mention by pagan writers of repute-Celsus, Marcus Aurelius, and others -was, actually, contemporary with Irenæus, and no one, except the "Pagan Evidence" lecturer Celsus, who studied Christianity expressly to refute it, knew anything about the new religion except by hearsay: it is very unlikely that Marcus Aurelius ever saw a Christian in his life. It is, accordingly, not very surprising that all we know about Irenæus derives solely from ecclesiastical sources. It is, however, very unlikely that the passage in question, with its flat repudiation of the orthodox Christian tradition. could have been written by anyone else. In the period immediately after Irenæus's traditional date, Christian theology, of which Irenæus was one of the founders, hardened into the rigid mould that it has possessed ever since. It is quite inconceivable that such an heretical statement should have then been put into the writings of so famous a champion of orthodoxy as the Bishop of Lyons. Indeed, it is very unlikely that such a daring criticism of the Gospel story would have been left in the text of anyone less famous. The text of Irenæus, one may suppose, was so sacrosanct and well-known that editors dared not tamper with it.

Accordingly, it is, in our submission, highly probable that the text of Irenæus represents his authentic text. If not, it cannot possibly be much later in date. Assuming, as I think we can, its authenticity, what do we actually know about Irenæus? Only, it seems, that he came from Greck-speaking Asia, and that he became Bishop of Lyons in 179, after a massacre of the Christians of Lyons, including the previous Bishop, in 178. (The Massacre, which rests entirely on Christian tradition, may be apocryphal, but enriched the martyrology of Christian legend with some famous names. Irenæus is reported to have himself been martyred eventually, on still more doubtful evidence.) Assuming that, as he says about Jesus, one does not reach "years of discretion" until about fifty, one may assume that he was probably a middle-aged man when he became Bishop. In which case, Irenæus would have been born about 130 of our Era; which tallies with the tradition that he was a disciple of Bishop Polycarp, a famous Christian Bishop, who was allegedly martyred about the middle of the century at an advanced age.

Irenaus, then, belonged to the second generation of the second century, and was probably born about a generation after the death of John who, we are expressly told, lived into the reign of Trajan; that is, into our second century. Such a man would be a fairly reliable witness to the state of belief current in Asiatic Christian circles when the new religion was in process of formation and before our Gospels were written; which, by all the available evidence, cannot have happened much before the beginning of our second century at the earliest—they may have been even later, as Walter Cassels has incontrovertibly demonstrated in his masterly study of Christian origins, Supernatural Religion.

Who was John, "the Lord's disciple," to whom Irenæus appeals so confidently? Upon that point, the Christian tradition of the second century is unanimous: the "John" to whom our author appealed, was the Founder of the Church in Asia, who died at an advanced age in Ephesus, and who "wore the golden breastplate," or was, originally, a Jewish priest in the Temple at Jerusalem before its destruction by the Romans A.D. 70. This "John," sometimes described as "The Apostle," and sometimes as "The Presbyter," or "Priest," was so famous a figure in the early Christian Church that one must accept his existence unless one is prepared to deny the whole tradition of Christian origins which the present writer, for one, is not. The standing of "John," whether "Apostle" or "Presbyter," in early Christian circles, is conclusively established by the fact that an entire "Johannine" Literature, of which he was the reputed author, a Gospel, an Apocalypse (our "Revelations"), and three Epistles, was incorporated into our New Testament despite the fact that it obviously represents quite a different tradition of Christian origins

Farewell! live long, drink deep, be jolly, Ye most illustrious votaries of folly!

THE lines prefixed above actually come at the close of a book written in 1510, which still has a great deal to commend it. Paradoxical though it may be in parts, The Praise of Folly by Erasmus (1466-1536) is suffused with common sense and bristling with wit and irony—besides being illustrated by Holbein—and provides a rare feast for the bibliophile. For the Freethinker, it offers even more. It is a voice from the Renaissance: a voice of culture and tolerance, but one that commanded (and employed) devastating satire. Erasmus was, as G. W. Foote indicated, the precursor of Voltaire.

Much has been said in disparagement of him as a man, and even Froude thought that he should have supported the Reformation. But Erasmus was a timid man who hated violence and war. He avoided the martyrdom of his friend Sir Thomas More (to whom The Praise of Folly is dedicated) but he also avoided the fanaticism of Martin Luther. He was more of a Freethinker, though less of a revolutionary than Luther, who called him godless, an enemy of true religion, a slanderer of Christ, a Lucian, an Epicurean and the vilest miscreant that ever disgraced the earth. Perhaps those were times for clear-cut decisions and Erasmus, like many intellectuals before and since, failed as a man of action. But there is a tendency to oversimplify such situations. Erasmus believed in toleration, than those of "Paul" and of the other Gospels. It is precisely this Asiatic "Johannine" tradition which Irenaus reflects, and it is from the Gospel of "John" that he quotes in the passage cited above: one would, we repeat, like to know what else was then in the Gospel which is not there now; since, obviously, if "John" taught what Irenaus he did, which we have no reason to doubt. our "John must have been pretty heavily bowdlerised in the interests of what later became orthodoxy, since the time when our Bishop quoted it and described the teaching of its alleged author.

We thus consider Irenæus as a reliable reporter of all least, one of the sources that later merged into our Testament" and into fully-evolved Christian orthodoxy As to who actually was the Jewish teacher who claime to have seen Abraham," we have no means of knowing. The fact, if it be such, that the "Jesus of the Gospels a myth, does not exclude the fact that a myth may be, and often is composite in the often is composite in character. The actual sayings and doings of actual mercule the fact that a myth may be first doings of actual men who lived in the Palestine of the first century may at some provide in the Palestine of the such a century may, at some points, be incorporated in such a composite mythe Of control of the control composite myth. Of such kind may have been trimed to reminiscences of an actual Jewish heretic who claimed in be a reincarnation of the Old Testament patriachs Gnostic circles, such as those in which "John" obvious wrote his Gospel, such fortering wrote his Gospel, such fantastic personages were, by not means, unknown means, unknown.

The mists of Time, ably assisted in this instance by millenium of Christian censorship, have now virtually obliterated every trace of the actual origins of Christianity and we are now never likely to know how the tremendor drama actually started. Only a few isolated pasare surviving either by accident or on account of the fame their traditional authors, give us occasional gimps through the swirling mists which shroud the beginning the most powerful religion that our planet has know Amongst such rare glimpses, that recorded by Irenen one of the most remarkable and, probably, most reliable.

The Wisdom of Folly

By C. McCALL

as Luther never did, and perceived that the Reformation had substituted a local tyranny for a Roman oneinfallible book for an infallible Church. The essential difference between the two men has been epitomised by Foote, viz., "Luther was a theologian, and Erasmus Humanist."

A scholarly humanism is clearly evident in The Print of Folly, which was written at the house of More prodescribed as "An oration of feigned matter, spotented FOLLY in her own person." Much of the book is fitting light-hearted and satirical ("trifles may be a whet to part serious thoughts") but there are passages of serious to the whole work is a plea for a sensible attitude to "Why, can any one be said properly to live to pleasure is denied?" it asks, and emphasises that it of mortal men only, who have faults but make and not of the gods who "have so much of wisdom they have very little of friendship; nay nothing of the which is true and hearty."

Living is a social matter, and Erasmus had no time for asceticism. For him, wisdom was "a readiness for doin good, and an expedite method of becoming serviceable the world." The nature of "good" is "communication and mirth should be imparted to others. When we run merrily on to our last stage of life, there should be fear or pain to die, for good company is sure to acceptable in the next life as it is in this. Clearly, the 953

It is 13245 lotes

ie 10

there says hn rests

1001 eged

)f. al

New

joxy;

imed ying.

s " js

, and 2110 first ch 3 in's

ed to

: 10

Jush

y no

by 3 ually

mily.

dous

ages.

10 51

17583 es of

OWN

US 15

]?,

atio

: 20

:ntu

d h!

us i

Yalis

a by ingh itell

har

Rill

na

1. (þ.1

, fol

OIR

21

Nº.

1:11

is no mounful Christian heaven here, and there would be no mourned that heaven here, and there would be no mournful carth either, if Erasmus's fool had his way. He had much in common with the sporting, jesting, pleasure to their escapades pleasure-loving Pagan deities and quotes their escapades with relieb with relish. Not so with "the old crabbed philosophers, and those up to so with "the old crabbed philosophers, and those who now supply their stead, the mortified monks Philosophers in their long beards and short cloaks esteem themselves the only favourites of wisdom, and bok upon the rest of mankind as the dirt and rubbish of treation. creation: yet these men's happiness is only a frantic craziness of brain; they build castles in the air, and infinite worlds in a vacuum." Their ideas are constantly tested in the laboratory What city, he he laboratory of life and found wanting. What city, he asks, would asks, would ever submit to the rigorous laws of Plato? the stoical Seneca "pretends that the only emblem of wisdom is a seneca "pretends that the supposing wisdom is the man without passion; whereas the supposing any person to be so, is perfectly to unman him, or else transforming him into some fabulous deity that never was, hor ever will be . . . making him a mere statue, immoveable, senseless, and altogether inactive. And if this be their wise man the merelyes, and remove wise man, let them take him to themselves, and remove him into Plato's commonwealth, the new Atlantis, or some abstract fairy land." Socrates was too intent upon abstract matters and "minded nothing of the world, and Its ordinary concerns."

Monks are "another sort of brainsick fools" whose first thinking whereunto they esteem a profound ignorance, is thinking carnal knowledge a great enemy to their spiritual 'elfare." proficients in divine mysteries the less they are poisoned They seem "confident of becoming greater with any human learning," imagine " they bear a sweet consort with the heavenly choir," and some "make a good profitable trade of beggary." Divines are dexterous in infolding the conception Infolding the most intricate mysteries about the conception of Christian the most intricate mysteries about the conception of Christ, the sacrament, and a thousand other "sublimated and refined niceties," but they hold absurd and extravagant tenets and niceties," but they hold absurd and extravagant to lengts and maintain that it is "a less aggravating fault to and maintain that it is a less appression a stitch a hundred men, than for a poor cobbler to set a stitch on the sabbath-day."

Those sadly misguided folk of to-day who acknowledge that so received from blessed saints and virgins or think that St. Christopher will protect them from danger, might Particut hear that "if any pray to Erasmus on such particular holidays, with the ceremony of wax candles, and other fopperies, he shall in a short time be rewarded which a plentiful increase of wealth and riches." (The bligation should be admitted in the Personal Column of the Present of What the Stars he P_{ress} . And the numberless readers of W hat the Stars orectell in the various women's weeklies may be interested h_{how} in the various women's weeknes may be sumptious h_{how} that although "it is all but a presumptious h_{how} that although "it is all but a presumptions as hposture, yet some to be sure will be so great fools as believe them (the astrologers).

No subject was sacrosanct to Erasmus. and bishops, who "in pomp and splendour have most equalled if not outgone secular princes " come in violent denunciation. The first "pretend themselves Orist's vicars," sometimes buy votes in the conclave, and have attended in the conclave, and including "prooms, ostlers, servinghave attendants galore, including "grooms, ostlers, serving-en, pimps (and somewhat else, which for modesty's sake shall not mention)." "They think to satisfy that Master hey pretend to serve, our Lord and Saviour, with their Breat the termines of instal-Breat state and magnificence, with the ceremonies of instal-Ments with the titles of reverence and holiness, and with exercising their episcopal function only in blessing and fraing Bald-pated priests are "most subtle in the craft Retting Bald-pated priests are "most subtle in the craft Betting money, and wonderfully skilled respective dues of tithes, offerings, perquisites, etc."

 E_{rasmus} is scathing in condemnation of the "cheat" of ardon pardons, indulgencies and other magical charms; "fumbling" over beads in "the rehearsal of such and such petitions (which some religious impostors invented, either for diversion, or what is more likely for advantage);" and belief in guardian saints with distinct offices: one for the toothache, another to grant easy delivery in child-birth, a third to recover lost goods, and so on.

But he reserves perhaps his most pungent satire for the schoolmen, who "can deal with any text of scripture as with a nose of wax, knead it into what shape best suits their interest;" in whose "abstracting brains" subtleties their interest;" in whose "abstracting brains" subtleties are "alchemized to a more refined sublimate;" and who make divisions in hell and purgatory " as if they were very well acquainted with the soil and situation of those infernal regions." In fact, so clever are they, that Erasmus recommends them as replacements for the many unsuccessful legions sent against the Turks and Saracens in holy wars. The engagement, surely, would be mighty pleasant, and victory unquestioned.

There, this appetizer (for it is nothing more) must end Erasmus, like his voice of Folly was " communicative and bountiful." Well might he exhort us to "drink deep" for, like a good host, he gave us genuine vintage. Whatever his personal deficiencies and his falterings at historic moments, he possessed a fine intellect and a lively wit which he poured into this delightful book.

Theatre

Escapade by Roger MacDougall. St. James's Theatre. THE subject-matter of this play is a little confusing, but there emerges with reasonable lucidity its main propaganda point, which is peace. Unfortunately, the situations are rather improbable, but you may find the play passably good if you can be convinced that all youngsters do not want to fight and that a sixteen-year-old boy could organise the whole of his school into a unit of militant pacifism.

Phyllis Calvert and Nigel Patrick play the parents of three boys. They are away at school, and the eldest at sixteen gets up a peace campaign. His bold action in this respect makes the parents conscious of their responsibilities, but they are at variance with each other, for the father is a stormy pacifist and the mother feels she cannot tolerate him and wants to part.

Although the play could be much tidier and clearer, it is saved by considerable wit in the dialogue and mainly good character parts. John Fernald's production is of high standard and the acting is excellent, notably from the two leads and also from Ernest Clark as the schoolmaster. Two junior actors also stand out clearly; one is Lance Secretan bent on keeping the truth from the master, and the other is Alec McCowen who has a more varied role.

That the young are sent to fight in case of war, and that they should seek their own means of keeping peace, is the message of this play. It is nothing new, but it is good to know that it is kept alive.

RAYMOND DOUGLAS.

The Design Argument

The crocodile's approach is deadly silent, and his attack swift as a flash of lightning. Even a large ox has small chance of escape from the great jaws when once dragged into deep water. Yet the reptile has so small a gullet that he can only swallow small morsels of solid food, and he conceals the bodies of the large animals in the reeds below the surface until they decompose before he can enjoy them.—W. S. CHADWICK, Man Killers and Marauders.

HISTORICAL JESUS AND THE MYTHICAL THE CHRIST. By Gerald Massey. What Christianity owes to Ancient Egypt. Price 1s.; postage 2d.

Friday, August 21, 1953

This Believing World

We often wonder whether the Church is obsessed by the word Jesus quite as much as by the word "Unity." Over and over again "Unity" is the principal topic for our clergy on the B.B.C.-the latest example being "Two Statements on Episcopacy," one by the Rev. G. L. Prestige who appears to be quite certain that God Almighty intended the Churches in England to be ruled by Bishops; and the other by the Rev. E. A. Payne, speaking for the Free Churches, who was just as certain that God Almighty didn't want any Bishops at all. Dr. Prestige seemed very surprised that the Free Churches should want to keep out of the Communion of the Church of England over such a small matter as a Bishop; while Dr. Payne seemed to think that as Jesus Christ wasn't ordained by any Bishop, these gentlemen were quite superfluous.

It was all a pretty tussle of wits, and lay people (such as ourselves) must have been quite unable to judge on such domestic matters. What did emerge from the two statements was that there wasn't the least likelihood of "Unity" so long as one side wanted Bishops, and the other side didn't. The divergence of views was just as acute between them as between the Church of Rome which wanted a Pope, and the Church of England which didn't. What a blessed word is " Unity "!

Whether History is, as Henry Ford is supposed to have said, "all bunk," or not, is a question for historians to discuss. But we are all for accuracy if we can get it, and a line in the American journal, Progressive World, for July on forcible conversions credits Charlemagne with giving "100,000 captured Turks five minutes to decide whether to become Christians or to be hanged." It would have been some job even for Charlemagne to hang 100,000 unlucky people-but where in history is the evidence for this statement? And were there any Turks at all in the days of Charlemagne?

Let us give credit to one Anglican Bishop, the Rt. Rev. H. H. Dixon of Brisbane, for giving an "emphatic 'No'" to the suggestion of the Acting Prime Minister, Sir Arthur Fadden, for prayers of thanks for the Korean Truce. He thought it "farcical to arrange thanksgiving services" after only a day's truce. Still, why should we have any thanksgiving services? After all, if the Lord really arranged the truce, he must have also arranged the Korean War. At all events, we shall maintain this until the Almighty assures us that he'is entirely innocent of the War.

A reader of this journal wants to know whether the Rev. Solomon Spaulding is or is not responsible for the famous (or infamous) Book of Mormon, the Bible of all good Mormons. Of course, the Heads of the Mormon Church indignantly deny that it was pinched from Spaulding, but there is enough evidence to show that Joseph Smith got hold of his unpublished MS which was called the Manuscript Found, and which tried to prove that the original aborigines of America were descended from the "lost' tribes of Israel.

The Mormon prophet added a whole lot of twaddle about Jesus coming to America to convert everybody, claimed that he "translated" the lot from "Golden Tablets guarded by Angels," and the Mormon Church was born. Unfortunately, Smith was bitterly attacked by his fellow Christians, and he eventually was foully murdered by them—which is not surprising to anybody who knows Christian history. The Book of Mormon is written in the style of the Authority Book of Mormon is written in this style of the Authorised Version of the Bible which thus adds distinction, dignity, veracity and authenticity to it as in the case of our own Holy Bible.

Disgruntled and unsuccessful artists can take hope from the experiences of a Mr. J. H. Bent, who is in the Spirit World and be want of a Mr. J. H. Bent, who is in the spirit World and he ought to be believed when he tells us that there he is creating "bcautiful landscapes, paintings of God rare richness and beauty" all through the laws of God. There is, he adds, " nothing to fear, because God is Love. This magnificent tribute to the Spiritual Uplift engendered by Spiritualism chould be size. by Spiritualism should give Hope to the Weary, the Sck. and the Miserable. Can Materialism do likewise? Not of your life! your life!

The story of the finding of the True Cross by St. Helens the mother of Constantine, fervently believed in by most il not all Christians, and not all Christians, and especially by Mr. Evelyn Water proves how wonderfully true is Spiritualism. It appears that when the three crosses were found, the presiding Bishop with St. Helena visited a sick woman and touched her with them. Two of the crosses utterly failed but the you have guessed it, the Third, the True Cross, cured the invalid at one touch. And where does Spiritualism come in? Well, it was a Spirit Chere does Spiritualism come in? Well, it was a Spirit Guide which led the Sainted Lady to the One True Cross!

Westering

Now, at the hour of the long shadow, When beetle drones, and the night-moth flies. When on trunk and branch golden glory lies. And coney seeks his hole beyond the meadow. Time is it too the dreamer made for home. To witness on the morrow long shadows come

N.S.S. Executive Committee 6th August, 1953

Present: Mr. Ridley (in the Chair), Mrs. Venton, Messrs. End Griffiths, Tiley, Johnson, Cleaver, Corstorphine, and the Scoreta Eight new members were admitted to the the Kingsl Eight new members were admitted to the Parent, Kings and West London Branches. It was decided to send a lette fraternal greetings to the National Congress of French f thinkers, meeting at Toulours An invital thinkers, meeting at Toulouse, August 13 to 16. An invert from the Southport Debating Society for a speaker to lead debate on the After-Life was read, and it was decided to it to the Manchester Branch. Owing to the possibility miler Taylor might not be able to attend the approaching Conference of the Ethical Union it una the approaching Conference of the Ethical Union it una the approaching Conference of the Ethical Union it una the approaching Conference of the Ethical Union of the Ethica thought activities in Folkestone and Trimley was received interest, Mr. Bryant having been an active and useful man of the Examine Committee for the second and the second man of the Second Se of the Executive Committee for some years prior to his defait from London. First information of a forthcoming legacy prior Society under the Will of the late Thomas A. Greene, comdra, Eire, was read.

P. VICTOR MORRIS, Secretary

BLASPHEMY!

I always understood that cricket was a sport and the men windulged in it were known as sportsmen. If they expected provided with sleeping carriages on the trifling railway journ from Leeds to London, they had better travel in a barre from Leeds to London, they had better travel in a hearse would be at least as exciting as the game they play. Letter the Editor of the Evening Standard.

IS THIS DEMOCRACY?

A youth parliament that held a debate in May on the abulities of the Monarchy has now been barred from meeting in Windle Council Chamber.—The Daily Express, August 8, 1953.

1953 n the thus it from pint that 15 d

God

215 leral

Sick.

ot on lena ost il

ugh

CER

iding

chad

-105

the ome ntcu

S.

nur.

sto

I D

1DC

M íC,

nh

THE FREETHINKER

THE FREETHINKER

41, Gray's Inn Road, London, W.C.1. Telephone: Holborn 2601.

To Correspondents

Mrs. K. M. GOLDNEY.—We are not quite sure of your point. We did not en under members of the did not say the gentlemen referred to were members of the S.P.R. but that they should join with those of your members who are "believers" in spirits.

The FREE THINKER will be forwarded direct from the Publishing Office at the following rates (Home and Abroad): One year, 14, (in 115, 4, 52, 50), but forware 12s; three months, 6s. ^{orce}spondent, S³·50); half-year, 12s.; three months, 6s.

correspondents are requested to write on one side of the paper only and to are requested to write an onssible. only and to make their letters as brief as possible.

Control Notices should reach the Secretary of the N.S.S. at this Office by Friday morning.

^{orders} for literature should be sent to the Business Manager of the Pioneer Press, 41, Gray's Inn Road, London, W.C.I, and not to the ratio Lecture Notices, Etc.

OUTDOOR 7-30 p.m. H. I.N.S.S. (Broadway Car Park).—Every Sunday, 7.30 p.m. H. DAY and A. H. WHARRAD.

Kingston Branch N.S.S. (Castle Street).—Sunday, August 23, 8 p.m. March N.S.S. (Castle Street).—Sunday, August 23, P.M.: Messrs. Barker and Mills.

^{o p.m.}: Messrs. BARKER and MILLS. ^{danchester} Branch N.S.S. (Deansgate Bomb Site).—Every week-D.m. Messrs. WoodCock and BARNES. Every Sunday, ³ ^p.m. ^at Platt Fields, a Lecture.

Sunday An Branch (White Stone Pond, Hampstead Heath).— Sunday August 23, noon : L. EBURY.

est London Branch N.S.S. (Marble Arch).—Every Sunday from ⁴p_m one Branch N.S.S. (Marble Arch).—Every Sunday from O'Nicity CLEAVER, Wood, and other ⁴ p_m onwards: Messrs. O'NEILL, CLEAVER, WOOD, and other peakere Peakers.

Ham Branch N.S.S. (Community Centre, Wanstead, 2 mins. Station),—Thursday, August 27: Open Meeting.

NOTES AND NEWS

For quite a number of years past The Freethinker has the good fortune to possess amongst its most valu-ble lite good fortune to possess amongst its most valuble literary assets the talented pen of Mr. C. G. L. Du Cann. Well known in the legal profession as a practicing Myocat advocate at the Criminal Bar, Mr. Du Cann seems, some-^b to find the time to get through an almost mythical mount find the time to get writing. His published works, mount of both reading and writing. His published works, huding several pamphlets published by our Pioneer p_{ress}^{auing} several pamphlets published by our of the aritish occupy whole columns in the catalogue of the minerous contribu-British Museum Library, whilst his numerous contributo this journal are equally distinguished by vast ding and by a style of singular elegance and literary cidity. Our learned contributor has now expanded the The of his contributions; in our contemporary, Truth August 7, 1953), appears a notable article by Mr. Du ann on Divorce entitled, Is the Church Right in Saying $b_{i_{Vorce}}^{\text{sum}}$ on Divorce entitled, Is the Church Night the $b_{i_{Vorce}}^{\text{sum}}$ is Un-Christian? We must congratulate the first time. $h_{e_{ad}e_{r_{s}}}^{e_{ad}e_{r_{s}}}$ of Truth, who will hear, perhaps for the first time, the case of Truth, who will hear, pot as a mystical sacrathe case for treating marriage not as a mystical sacra-Ment but as a civil ceremony governed by common sense onsiderations.

 M_r Du Cann marshals his attack with sharp legal preestion. Du Cann marshals his attack with sharp resonance on the subject He emphasises the contradictory teachings on the Gospels. bject of Divorce ascribed to the Jesus of the Gospels, the author appears to regard as an historical, human character. The writer then proceeds to the the author appears attitude taken up by the Christian Churches upon this subject at different times, the contradictory attitude taken up by the

Dr. Marie Stopes and her pamphlet on the Royal Commission on the Press

OUR contributor, Mr. H. Cutner, writes as follows: "In my review of Dr. Marie Stopes's pamphlet-a review completely favourable to her and her cause--I recalled an incident which took place about 30 years ago, and made certain comments to which she has taken exception. I wish to say that I am sorry if my remarks have done her any injustice whatsoever. I based my remarks on my memory of a discussion at a public meeting 30 years ago; but'I understand that Dr. Stopes published in the same year her Contraception: Its Theory, History and Practice in which she gave (and still gives in the Eighth Edition) full and documented details about Bradlaugh and the others. Reference should be made to this book for a correct representation of her views. Having always admired her courageous stand on behalf of Birth Control against all bigots, I had no intention of injuring her reputation. I trust that she will accept this very sincere apology .--- H. CUTNER."

(We have pleasure in inserting the above apology and in fully associating ourselves with its terms.- EDITOR.)

and places. Actually, we find it rather difficult to accept some of our author's arguments on such lines. No doubt, the Church has often deviated from the teaching of the "Master," but could it have done anything else? As far as its actual beginnings can be reconstructed, Christianity seems to have begun, not as a fixed system, but rather as a "revivalist" movement. The Founders seem to have believed that the end of the world was at hand; and their teaching on marriage as on other matters was adapted to such beliefs. Could the Church do anything else except modify such visionary teachings in a world which obstinately continued to exist long after the "end" was overdue? Even assuming the existence of an historical Jesus of Nazareth, we do not imagine that he said the last word on Divorce or, indeed, on anything. However, we do not suppose that Canon Roger Lloyd, of Winchester, who is to reply to Mr. Du Cann in the next issue of Truth, is likely to take this precise line!

God Save the B.B.C.!

(News Item: Beauty Queen Patricia Rossiter, of Bristol, has been warned by the B.B.C. that she must not wear a bathing suit old Pat, a clerk, will wear a dress run-up by her Mother.) A Show from Brighton was arranged in which a Beauty Queen Was due to make a "brief" appearance on the T.V. screen. The B.B.C. in horror cried with all its awful might-"Unless the lady wears a dress there'll be no Show to-night!"

And so her Mother had to get her needle out tout-suite And run-up something covering the lower bits of meat. For nasty-minded humbug this must surely take the bun-Thank God we have a B.B.C. to see we see no fun! W. H. WOOD.

Our older readers will remember the excellent comic verse which Mr. W. H. Wood used to contribute to this journal. Mr Wood ceased to write for The Freethinker on account of differences of opinion on the subject of Materialism. We have much pleasure in welcoming him back to our columns where we shall published an article in the near future in which he defends his position. The Freethinker, as befits its name, is always open to all forms of bona fide Freethought.

THE FREETHINKER

Robert Taylor The Devil's Chaplain (1784-1844) By H. CUTNER

(Continued from page 263)

AND there are other references in all of which he gives details to support his case; such as, to come back to the "Fall of Man" again, when he points out, "And that appearance of natural dialogue, and real character of speeches and answers, which run through the four gospels, results from the fact of their being the speeches set down to be spoken by the persons who enacted the characters. The persons being as real as the Keans and Kembles of the modern drama but the characters being altogether as imaginary as the Vampires, Fiends, Gods, or Devils, which they represent so ingeniously." And he quotes Clemens Alexandrinus: "All these religious tragedies had a common foundation, only differently set off, and that foundation was the fictitious death and resurrection of the Sun, the soul of the world, the principle of life and motion."

But the reader must turn to the Devil's Pulpit and learn for himself how much original research and how much sheer thinking Taylor put into his lectures. As has already been said, he was years before his time in many ways, and, of course, he could get but little further than his time when depending upon the authorities of his own day. So far as it goes, and bearing always in mind that the question of the origins of Christianity-and for that matter Judaism, and other religions as well must necessarily have a wider field than the solar myth theories alone, the Devil's Pulpit can still be read with profit. And Robertson in his Courses of Study (1932) marks out the Diegesis as " still worth attention " an opinion at direct variance with that of the Rev. A. Gordon who said the book was "a curious medley of random judgments and second-hand learning" which criticism can be levelled at any historical work, not even excepting Gibbon. The real query must be, of what critical and historical value as they stand are the Diegesis and the Devil's Pulpit? And the answer is that they are both works of remarkable quality and certainly " still worth attention."

While Taylor was delivering his lectures at the Rotunda, Carlile published a drama for him, partly written in blank verse, called Swing (1831). Its exact title is SWING: / OR/WHO ARE THE INCENDIARIES?/FOUNDED ON LATE CIRCUMSTANCES, AND AS PERFORMED THE BY REV. ROBERT /AT/The Rotunda. TAYLOR, A.B. It was sold at one shilling. The copy in the British Museum was evidently presented by the author to the famous actor Charles Kemble, for it has the following, written in Taylor's own handwriting, on the fly-leaf:

C. Kemble, Esq. The Rev. Mr. Taylor respectfully gratifies his own vanity with the hope of affording some entertainment to Mr. Kemble on this specimen of what the Drama should be. 17, Carey Street, Lincoln's Inn.

Swing is pure propaganda, mostly against the authorities for allowing so much misery to prevail among the poor. The Archbishop of Cant is introduced with Judge Jeffries and members of the "proletariat," and Taylor has some magnificent revolutionary sentiments in which he shows a decided democratic spirit. He is under no illusions as to Royalty:-

FRANK : But why don't the poor people petition good King James, who is the best King that ever sat upon a throne?

JOIN: Why, yes, Frank, he's the best because he happens to be upon the throne. Can you tell me who was not the best King while he was reigning? The devil himself will be the best when it comes to his turn in the royal family.

It need hardly be said that Taylor was no bein But dramatist, nor even a born writer of blank verse. But as far as it room from the blank verse. as far as it goes Swing is a remarkable production. closes with a line Taylor considered of noble morality "Who'd live bioscil "Who'd live himself must let his neighbour live!" Never has that sentiment has that sentiment seemed more applicable than during the tragic days of a service the tragic days of a great war.

Robert Taylor was too badly treated in gaol on his second imprisonment to produce any other book such 30 either the Syntamic on the Second Secon either the Syntagma or the Diegesis. But on his relation he commended a weekly publication entitled Philalethean, by Talasiphron, a curious production entitled written by himself written by himself. It ran for three months only for September 21, 1832 to 1 September 21, 1833 to January 18, 1834, at 2d. a copy It consisted of two parts—one on "a course of Astrone" mical Theology" and the other was his own "the biography which began in No. 2 and was entitled "the and Opinions of Talasiphron." The publication suddenly ceased, the present writer being work to find any ceased, the present writer being unable to find any reference as to the cause. How many copies survive. is impossible to say, as even the immense librar, in the British Museum does not possess one. It may be conjectured, however, that the reason for its ceasing publication was Taylor's mattine reason for its ceasing publication was the reason for its ceasing publ tion was Taylor's marriage, and his flight to Tours with his wife. He lived there ten years but does not seen for have made any further have made any further published contribution to From thought. He contained to the contribution to From the contributic thought. He certainly left a large quantity of manuscript which were probably destroyed by his wife or scattered out of existence, the force of the force out of existence, the fate of so much valuable literature

The first page of the Philalethean opens with the heading "Axioms", and these are worth reproducing:-

The annexed are the twelve grand axioms upon which the argumentation through grand axioms upon which whole argumentation throughout this intended course Astronomical Theology is found this intended course Astronomical Theology is founded; and which are plented to the steadily borne in mind, as they will be constantly referred to:

I. Nothing is to be believed.

11. Conviction is to be withheld as long as possible.

- III. Nothing is sacred.
- IV. Nothing is contemptible. V. Nothing is either above or below nature. VI. No two truths can possibly be opposed to each other (11. No ideas of more modern
- VII. No ideas of more modern origin can possibly expres
- the meanings of more ancient terms. VIII. No original word could possibly have consisted
- IX. The nature and operations of the human mind have all ages been the same
 - X. There never was any means or possibility of knowledge
- to man, but by and through experience. XI. Nothing but the phenomena can authenticate hypothesis; and the phenomena must always pre-XII. The hypothesis which solves the phenomena is trut

The tenth axiom, that all we know is experience, is ticularly modern and the other axioms show The dama able treatment meted out to a man of his calibre ment the loss to the world at large of a fine and original thinks and there never were at any time many to spare in world of ours. For the rest at the line world of ours. For the rest, the lectures on various asp of the solar myth make intensely interesting reading in those who are studying the problem. Always is T engrossed by questions of philology and "word-play even if one does not word-play the make even if one does not agree with his conclusions, he make many provocative suggestions.

(To be concluded)

THE FREETHINKER

Secularism and Pacifism

(Published in "Peace News," July 10, 1953)

By P. VICTOR MORRIS

Secretary, National Secular Society

1953 born

Bul

lity

Nevel

Juring

n his ich as elease

Thi

tirel)

front

copy

rone

Auto

Life

den!

an) 12.

n the coll

blica with in ki

Free :npo

lerev re.

1din!

北方

10 ferrei

部 pre d el 10 2

1001

En!

de.

104 104

pl.

:311

i d ch

n'l'

Į8

1.

nu

100

][p,

AS Peace News has recently contained articles on the autitudes of News has recently contained articles on the attitudes of various religious denominations towards Pacifism, a statement from a representative of a body of People who mathematic from a representative of a body and people who most strongly reject the religious outlook and hould be of stically embrace a secular philosophy of life hould be of interest to readers of this journal.

The National Secular Society, which describes itself as The Organisation of Militant Freethought," was formed 1866 bio Given and the and the always been 1866 by Charles Bradlaugh, and has always been dentified with charles Bradlaugh, and has always been dentified with opposition to all supernatural beliefs as ing contrary to reason and inimical to human progress; along with its criticism of religious creeds and institutions, it has consistently promulgated a programme of ducational educational and social reforms in line with the most dvanced and humane opinions current during its existence. Principles and Objects " as accepted by all members contain this clause that should find an approving echo the minds of readers of Peace News: "To promote the aternity of readers of Peace News: "To promote the aternity of all peoples as a means of advancing universal

The Society's list of "Immediate Practical Objects" teed not be accepted in toto. Individuals work for those wey uphold most strongly. The objects include freedom for the second publication, legal and economic equality to the second publication of marriage and divorce laws, for the sexes, improvement of marriage and divorce laws, herfering of penalties upon opinions, abrogation of laws merfering with the free use of Sunday for recreation and thertainment, humaner methods of dealing with social misfits misfits, protection of animals from cruelty and blood Ports and so on. It should be significant to pacifists that the loss on. It should be significant to pacifists that at the 1952 Annual Conference of the Society, when the Immediate Practical Objects " were revised, the following Prace at the head of the list: The promotion of arbitration for beace between nations, the substitution of arbitration for ar in the settlement of international disputes, and the muntering of militaristic propaganda, leading to the ^{boognition} that modern war is futile and can only bring Bout the ultimate destruction of civilisation."

How members of the N.S.S. seek to realise these objects h_{left} to their own choice, which is natural amongst people h_{h_0} and h_0 the other own choice, which is natural accession of all advocate complete freedom of discussion of all So far as pacifism is concerned, some, I know, ong to the Peace Pledge Union. Others have resisted sonscription and served prison sentences in consequence. Others have, temporarily at any rate, held that military the nave, temporarily at any rate, then the necessity. to not know of any who have emulated the politicians the wore "conscientious objectors" while of military age and ware "conscientious objectors" while for the call-up. War supporters when no longer liable for the call-up. k_{now} a number whose development has been in the Muself for example. security a number whose development of example.

Secular, as distinct from religious, pacifism claims no vine sanction for its practice. It rests on the observed futility of war and the necessity of ending the threat of militaries worth preserving. hitarism to all human achievements worth preserving. h arises from the affirmation of the supreme value of free broof of as a purifying agent in social life. Since every for of the force of ideas is naturally destructive of blind have in the force of ideas is naturally destruction that many ecularistic idea of force, it is not surprising that many ecularists regard reliance on armaments as just another superstition from the past, based on fear and ignorance, to be exposed along with other beliefs they hold to be erroneous and mischievous.

This should not prevent their working with other pacifists against war and the war machine, irrespective of the grounds on which others may base their ideals. It is sometimes difficult for them to do so, because bodies of opinion exist in most progressive and humane movements which regard secularists with disfavour and are not willing to allow them to co-operate on equal terms in efforts to prosecute aims held in common. Fortunately this attitude appears to be less widespread than it was, and we have the heartening spectacle of articles from The Freethinker being recently reprinted in Peace News, and vice versa.

To sum up, while making no claim that one hundred per cent. of the members of the National Secular Society are such ardent pacifists and anti-militarists as Is Its Secretary. I am certain that the large majority of them are prepared to co-operate with other active movements and individuals aiming at the ending of all war by methods that go beyond the customary lip-service paid to peace. They ask no favour, but they expect fair treatment, meaning the equal right with others to voice their pacifism from the standpoint of their personal opinions.

The Buddha Business

[We are obliged to Freedom for permission to reprint this article.-EDITOR.]

IN the last issue of Freedom, a correspondent, Max Flisher, takes me to task for my analysis of the Buddhist rôle in Burmese politics. Anarchism, of course, can have no integration with any religious authority whatsoever, and it is an illusion to believe that one can be of " an anarchist turn of mind " as he puts it, induced by the reasonings of priests of whatever calibre. He may well mistake selfabnegation for personal liberation.

Like many Westerners, he tries to rationalise his beliefs by saying that "Buddhism must be termed rationalist, agnostic and free-thinking" and is an ethical belief rather than a superstitious one. Exactly the same excuses are made, on a higher level, for Christianity and other illusions. Even a Spanish Catholic priest, exhibiting pieces of the cross oozing blood on Good Friday or some such twaddle, will explain to the hard-headed that this is only a "representation", although he will not reveal the same thing to his flock.

Naturally one cannot say much against the essential spirit of goodness, etc., etc., that figures in place of God as the result of a rationalisation of Buddhism, Christianity and other religions. Heinrich Heine remarked that perhaps this new God-pure spirit this parvenu of Heaven who is now so ethical, so cosmopolitan and universally cultured, harbours a secret resentment against the poor Jews who keep reminding him in their synagogues of his one-time obscure national connections. Perhaps the old gentleman wants to forget that he is of Palestinian extraction, and that he was the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and that his name was then Jehovah.'

Some similar remarks might be made of the Buddha, who seems to be trying to pass off in Vedanta and Theosophical societies in the West as a similar "ethical cosmopolitan"! We had better take a look at the god's " obscure national connections " in India. The legend has it that Sidharta Gautama "attained enlightenment" under a tree in Raigir. This tree has now much the same adoration attached to it as the cross in Christianity. The royal monk, Asoka, cut it down when he was a pagan king, but on becoming a Buddhist venerated it, as it had the habit of sprouting again. His jealous wife cut it down, and up popped the tree again. After 2,500 years the same tree still exists! The enormous wealth extracted from the peasants has built a shrine nearby that cost a fortune, and has been emulated by similar pagodas throughout the Buddhist world. Enlightenment?

Standards of poverty were enforced upon generation after generation throughout the Buddhist world because of the desire of rulers to build image after image of the god Buddha, as Gautama came to be considered. A somewhat exacting god, pleased at the sight of his own image repeated countless times in temple after temple throughout the east, the level of his freethought may be judged by the sacrifices offered such as the famous offerings placed by Tensing recently on top of Mount Everest.

The Western ethical cosmopolitan Mr. Buddha is not of much danger, perhaps, exacting no forced tributes in the way of temples and images nor able to impose an army of lazy monks upon an impoverished population. But a certain political danger lies in such assumptions as made by Max Flisher in his letter. He says "that it exists peaceably beside Marxism is merely a continuation of its 2.500-year-old history of non-dogmatism and benevolence." I do not quite know what he imagines the Marxist-Buddhist "Red Star" Communists are doing in the jungles of Burma. They are not peaceably contemplating their navels any more than the Socialist-Buddhist Government, but engaged in a long-drawn-out bitter, bloody, fratricidal and tyrannical war. While they co-ist "peaceably" as regards each other, they do not do so for any peaceable or benevolent purpose and as for non-dogmatism, it is hardly necessary to relate what happens to those who do not wish to fight alongside them.

I have dilated on this subject because Buddhism is little known in this country, except the watered-down variety. In the East, no less than the West, the gods, no less than the kings and leaders, have to be destroyed in men's minds before they can hope for freedom.

INTERNATIONALIST.

Correspondence

A TESTIMONIAL FROM CANADA!

Sir, As a new subscriber I want to say I wish those Ridley articles were a lot longer. Great stuff, okay. The world needs telling. So I pass Freethinker along being always ready to duck! Most folks have no idea of howcome a body "gets that way" being a freethinker. I was brought up church and I know. The general notion of an atheist is laughable, come to con it clowely. Hole considered but wrong-bended and witful not honest and sincere. That he knows God to be of man's own invention is never allowed. The "faith" wallahs believe he's invention is never allowed. The "faith waitans better outjust another faithy, only wrong. I don't forget my churchy outlook. How lovely to be free in your mind! Wish there was something I could do to help others to attain the same blissful state. -Yours, etc., JAMES F. KIRKHAM.

WAGES SIR, What is the basis of Mr. Paul Varney's assertion in The Freethinker, August 7, that the Trade Unions "have succeeded in demanding two million pounds per day more in wages than the nation is earning"? If that were really the position, what does Mr. Varney think that section of the nation not Trade Union is in the section of the mation of the field. Unionist is living on? If there were not a surplus derived from the labour of the working classes, there would be nothing for the other classes to live on.

The Economic Journal last August (1952) in an elaborate analysis on this subject gave figures showing that the working classes' share of the total gave figures are showing that the working the total gave figures are showing that the working the total gave figures are showing that the working the total gave figures are showing that the working the total gave figures are showing that the working the total gave figures are showing the total gave figures are showing that the working the total gave figures are showing tota classes' share of the total product of the country was in 1881, a period when wages were very low. Your etc., C. H. NORMS.

SIR,—In Christian Political Theatre on stage in Korea appeared by good known actor Synamon Die stage in korea appeared very good known actor Syngman Rhee. This time he want to take camouflaged main role to make suitable peace or armister for white Christian diplometer

Christian armies from God's own land and other Christian countries containing God-fearing Christian soldiers coming rent chosen nations, very provid of Christian soldiers coming rent countries containing God-fearing Christian soldiers comine func-chosen nations, very proud of their pure hundred per cent. Americans and men, etc., failed with their modern deadh arms. What Rhee will do with his heartbroken, discoura-and ruined people, with hardful of men against China and Russian giants, with tremendous war industries behing the Co-munists, when Rhee has not his own modern war industry for munists, when Rhee has not his own modern war industry, with the has not his own modern war industry, with the the him? Christians see that they were forsaken by their from Christian superstitition crimer countries, now nearly free forsaken by their from Christian superstitition. from Christian superstitition, crimes and exploitation fraud flaged Rhee wants to use his yellow pagan South Korean aread Nations sending Christian missionaries to pagan countries printing Bible in many languages, failed in Korea. For the printing Bible in many languages, failed in Korea. For the preasons make the peace or armistice in Korea difficult, even impossible.

1. Weakness of Christian armies north of 38th Parallel, For war in Korea, and disagreement of Christian diplomats East encouraged the Reds.

2. Increased work in war industry was necessary in God's and to decrease the unservice of the second 2. Increased work in war industry was necessary in God's land to decrease the unemployment, but unemployment is wide trouble and step to Godless Communism. It is not that during two World Wars God's own country sold war material to both fighting sides. Munition manufacturing was in prior to both fighting sides. Munition manufacturing was in private hands, with Church having shares in such business will it go on? will it go on?

3. War in Korea gives time and opportunity to make and expected big scale war. Korea itself is research station even new deadly arms can be tested on living human targets and even thing can be destroyed without responsibility.

4. War does not affect Russia. She was raised to power white Christian Anglo-Saxon diplomats in Teheran. Yalta Potsdam. Anglo-Saxon diplomats Potsdam. Anglo-Saxon diplomats in Teheran, Yalla nino free people with modern to Russia lion free people with modern' industries in Eastern Poland, Chehia and Hungary. Before free people, new slaves in Soviet war industry, producing arms for Russia Korea. Anglo-Saxon diplomate gave to provide state Korea. Anglo-Saxon diplomats gave to Russia millions of slave Industries belonged before to free cultural nations and particular raw materials we find in satellites. The materials we find in satellites. raw materials we find in satellites. There is war in Korchuld Christian black marketeers and smugglers sent many forbid goods to Soviet Union. Of course, Christian God forgives or crime called by believers sinning, and the officers of faw can bribed. Yes, sir, business is business, especially in war-time Yours, etc., K. LIDAK raw materials we find in satellites. There is war in Korch

SIR. Supernatural religion to me is essence of human indigent insisting men are helpless, sinful worms of earth with not in them. Secularism is the opposite. Dignity by power understanding to make this earth O.K. for human relicing can be a trifle patient, maybe, but tolerance? Is it right thinkable?

Under the cloak of religious unrealism evils creep unber their fruition in contractions to their fruition in catastrophe. Picture the sorrow of and ask "Toleration "?-Yours, etc., HARRY FIDDLY

SIR. The "Proof of Prayer" story by Mr. James F. Kither your issue of August 7 reminds your issue of August 7 reminds me of another one

Your readers may be interested to learn that the above per Evan Roberts, was an answer to the prayers of Rev. Seth Jer who had been constantly praying for movers of Rev. Seth Review who had been constantly praying for years before the field for God to take a lad from the coalmines or from the field by Rev. Robert Ellis, B.A.) Yours, etc., " Sospan Fact